Dedication

I would like to dedicate this thesis to

Brett Steven Ryan

who sadly passed away

in February 2007.

Acknowledgements

My sincere appreciation is given to Dr Kevin Laws, my supervisor, who has been working tirelessly and with dedication over the entire course of my candidature. Our innumerable in depth discussions have led to a thesis for which I have great respect and satisfaction. I am most appreciative of his supervision of the research and his keen interest in the study. I thank him for his understanding and great humanity as I faced various challenges throughout the time of my candidature. Above all, he has a kind heart and gave me the opportunity to study in Australia. I would also like to thank my associate supervisor, Dr George Odhiambo, for his knowledge and expertise in relation to education leadership.

The research would not have been possible without the many Presidents and senior executives of the six Rajabhat Universities in Bangkok, who so generously agreed to be interviewed. All my participants willingly and unselfishly shared their time, insights and unique experiences, providing a rich source of expert commentary. I especially thank those administrative staff at the Education and Social Work Faculty for the high level of compassionate support during the darkest time of my life and loss. Also my gratitude goes to the editor, Mr Roger and Ms Christabel Wescombe and Dr Jennifer M. Gamble who helped me to clarify and polish my thesis ready for examination. My grateful thanks to the Royal Thai Government who provided me with a scholarship to expand my knowledge and academic experiences and the opportunity to study in Australia.

My deep appreciation is extended to Mr Brett Ryan for his generous support, wisdom and encouragement. It was he who gave me enough courage to start, the support to continue, and the inspiration to complete. As a superb educator, he was always available when I needed to consult him and his suggestions certainly clarified my thoughts. He has helped so many other students to do the same. Brett always said that he wanted to be there with me in the Great Hall at my graduation ceremony. This thought has kept me going knowing that will now it will be in spirit. I would like to express my heartfelt and grateful thanks to him as a great educator and my best friend. Brett was the most important part of my journey and part of all the best memories that I have of Australia. I will never forget him.

I would like to thank my parents and my dear friends: Dr Michael Horsley, Dr Richard Walker, Ms Leone Raffaele, Ms Yoon-Suk Hwang, Miss Prapassara Thanosawan, Mr Gilbert Cheng and the love of my heart for the immense patience and support they have shown over the years it took to write this thesis.
