I have been told countless times by friends that Honours represents the most difficult time in a university student’s career. They were right. What started as a single thought developed into a year–long adventure through soaring highs and profound lows that culminated in this thesis. I owe a tremendous amount to everyone for helping me to see this project through.

I thank Dr Nick Riemer and Dr Jason Johnston for sharing with me pieces of their linguistic wisdom, and also the linguistics Honours cohort for the short (but sweet) time we spent together.

I thank my friends and family for their company, care and kindness throughout the year. Had it not been for their love and support, I would not have made it this far; or, at least, not as happily. Special thanks are due to Erin and Bill for proofreading various bits and pieces and providing excellent suggestions. To Nick, who always listened with undue patience, who chauffeured me back and forth between libraries, who forced me to work instead of play Super Smash Bros., and who encouraged and supported me through the final—and most difficult—stages of this year: thank you.

Most importantly, I thank my supervisor Dr Monika Bednarek for her patience, support and guidance through this year. It has been a privilege to share her linguistic knowledge and, most importantly, her friendship.

To everyone who supported me, in whatever way: At first I was afraid—I was petrified—I kept thinking “I could never write this thesis without you by my side”.

And I couldn’t have.

Chapter 1: Introduction

This thesis explores the linguistic construction of sexual identities in online personal-ads for male-male casual sex. Specifically, it will investigate how POSTERS of Craigslist advertisements for casual sex construct their identity in part through defining not only their pleasure, but also a relationship of power and intimacy with the identity of the desired TARGET in creating imaginary sexual encounters. The analysis will make use of quantitative corpus linguistic methods and qualitative analytical frameworks in drawing out and interpreting the empirically-valid patterns of discourse that construct these identities and relationships.

This chapter presents an introduction to the study. Section 1.1 will outline the aims of the research and the questions that guide the analysis. Section 1.2 will explore the motivations that drive the research, and Section 1.3 will situate the thesis within the wider linguistic field. The chapter concludes with Section 1.4 which will define the structure of the thesis.

1.1 Aims and Objectives

This thesis investigates the linguistic mechanisms for negotiating pleasure and inter-actor power and intimacy in personal-ads in which a “real” male participant seeks an “imagined” male participant for an imaginary erotic act.\(^1\) The performance of sexual acts by two (or more) actors can be analysed according to the key motivations for pursuing it: power, pleasure and intimacy (Hill & Preston 1996). By combining quantitative and qualitative methods in analysing the linguistic construction of imaginary sexual acts, this thesis will explore how sexualised identities are constructed through language, in particular through the definition of a relationship to another sexualised identity and in relation to particular sexual practices (such as fellatio and anal intercourse).

This thesis will interpret power through verb semantics and the assignment of semantic roles (Agent, Experiencer, Beneficiary and Patient) to participants in order to analyse the various means of constructing pleasure and negotiating inter-actor power. Further, intimacy will be investigated by analysing the advertisers’ representations of their desired targets’ identity and their own. Ultimately, this thesis will show how men who seek casual sex with men construct identities of pleasure, and how they position themselves as more or less (or equally) powerful and intimate than their imaginary sexual partner.

\(^1\) The “real” participant is the POSTER of the advertisement, while the “imagined” participant is the TARGET of the advertisements who is unknown to the POSTER. His identity is imagined by the POSTER who cannot know whether there exists someone from the target audience of Craigslist men-for-men personal-ads for casual sex, given the nature of the genre of personal-ads.

1.2 Motivations and Significance

Sexuality—and, more particularly, sexual action—is a fundamental part of the human experience (Cameron and Kulick 2006), which is not only the means of our species’ continued existence, but also a source of pleasure (Metson & Buss 2007). It is ubiquitous in our lives: it pervades advertisements and media, literary and visual art, friends’ narratives and our own thoughts. In spite of this, it has been treated with considerable suspicion in the domain of academia: until fairly recently, linguistic scholarship has almost entirely avoided this topic. Few researchers have investigated the linguistic construction and description of erotic acts (e.g. Talbot 1997; Baker 2005), and this scholarship has focussed mainly on stereotypes of sexuality and sexual identity within literary contexts. This thesis aims to fill a part of the extensive gap in our understanding of the language of sexuality. It focusses on virtual (online) personal-ads, because of the increased significance of the online networks as a tool for communication (Wood and Smith 2005: 1).

Casual sexual relations have undergone a significant increase in media exposure and academic interest in the last decade (Wentland and Reissing 2011: 75), primarily in the discipline of psychological and behavioural sciences (e.g. Maticka-Tyndale et al. 2003; Wentland and Reissing 2011; Danube et al. 2014). The interest in casual sexual relations, and the relative youth of this area of study, justify and vindicate further academic research, particular in the field of linguistics which has, until now, avoided the topic entirely. This makes personal-ads for casual sex an appropriate genre and medium for a study of the linguistic construction of sexualised identity.

1.3 Situation within Current Research

There is an extensive body of works in the field of corpus linguistics (e.g. McEnery & Wilson 1996; Stubbs 2001; Baker 2003) (see Section 3.2.1), of which a recent and growing subfield is corpus applications to sociolinguistics, and identity construction (e.g. Baker 2003, 2010). In particular, this thesis acts as an extension of the sociolinguistic study of the interrelated concepts of gender and sexuality (e.g. Cameron & Kulick 2003, 2006). This thesis positions itself within these research domains, bringing together qualitative and quantitative approaches to a sociolinguistic analysis of identity construction.

1.4 Thesis Structure

Chapter 2—Literature Review—will introduce the existing literature that forms the foundation for this thesis—the interrelated concepts of language, gender and sexuality, and the genre of personal advertisements—and will position this thesis within the field of research.

Chapter 3—Data, Methodology and Analytical Frameworks—will begin with a detailed explanation of the data used in this thesis before outlining the corpus methods used in analysing the data. This chapter will also introduce the analytical frameworks of semantic role theory (Carnie 2007) for analysing participant power and pleasure, and of social actor analysis (van Leeuwen 2008) for analysing inter-actor intimacy.

Chapters 4 and 5 will analyse the data and present an interpretation of the linguistic construction of power, pleasure and intimacy. Chapter 4—Power and Pleasure in Semantic Role Analysis—will analyse the negotiation of power and the construction of pleasure through the analysis of verb semantics and the assignment of semantic roles (Agent, Experiencer, Beneficiary and Patient) to social actors in the texts. Chapter 5—Intimacy in Social actor Analysis—will analyse the construction of intimacy through the discursive representation of social actors within van Leeuwen’s “sociosemantic inventory” (van Leeuwen 2008: 23).

Chapter 6—Conclusion—will summarise the findings of the analysis, and outline the implications of these results, and discuss its limitations alongside future directions for research. The conclusion will highlight that while this thesis does not attempt to analyse all aspects of power, pleasure and intimacy, or identity construction, it does make an important contribution to the understanding of the relationship between sexualised identities.
Chapter 2: Literature Review

Chapter 2 summarises the existing literature that forms the foundation of this study and identifies the areas in which this study aims to make an original contribution. Section 2.1 summarises the development of the field of research concerned with the interrelated concepts of language, gender and sexuality. Section 2.2 outlines the research of the personal-advertisement genre. Finally, section 2.3 summarises the field of research and identifies the gap that motivates the present research.

2.1 Language and Sex

The language of and about sexual action does not occur in a vacuum: it is produced by real speakers whose linguistic choices are indelibly linked to their identity. As this chapter will outline, research on the interrelated concepts of language, gender and sexuality attempts to describe the use of language as a means of constructing gendered and sexualised identities and is historically motivated by the wider socio-political contexts that motivated its development.

2.1.1 Language and Gender

The study of language and gender began with three accounts for the apparent linguistic differences between men and women, known today as the “3Ds” (Baker 2008: 24): deficit, dominance and difference theories. All three theories were predicated on a rigid structuralist dichotomy: that men and women could form binarily discrete and homogeneous linguistic communities that could be explained by overarching social structures (Cameron 2005: 484).

Jespersen (1922) proposed the deficit model which demotes women’s language as a “deficient approximation of men’s” (Baker 2008: 31) and accounts for the linguistic differences between men and women as functions of the historical division of labour that conditioned communicative habits (Jespersen 1922: 254). According to Jespersen, women lacked fluency and their vocabulary, while often more extensive than men’s, did not correlate with increased intelligence or communicative prowess (Jespersen 1922). According to the deficit model, social conditioning results in linguistic distinctions between the two sexes, rather than any linguistic capability or deficiency inherent to either group.
During the second-wave feminist movement of the 1960s, the dominance theory similarly sought to analyse linguistic phenomena through the perspective of societally constructed differences: in this case, the oppression of women by men. Lakoff (1975) explored the language used by and about women that results in women being “systematically denied access to power” (Lakoff 1975: 7) by means of, and demonstrated by, language. Among other things, she explored the way women and men are labelled differently and how these incongruous pairs expose the power discrepancy between men and women and elevate men to a position of power (Lakoff 1975: 29).

The contrasting difference theory proposed by Tannen (1990) suggested that men’s and women’s linguistic practices were not ranked by value (as in the deficit theory), or reflective of widespread societal oppression (as in the dominance theory); rather, they represent two distinct socially-conditioned means of achieving distinct aims. Tannen (1990) asserted that men are focussed primarily on independence and women are focussed on intimacy, and that these foci are established according to models of men’s and women’s behaviour that are emulated and reinforced during childhood: boys learn to play in groups that are structured hierarchically, while girls play in small groups where “intimacy is key” (Tannen 1990: 18-19). As a result, men and women were considered to be speaking cross-culturally, using “different genderlects” (Tannen 1990: 18; for further discussion, see Motschenbacher 2011: 46). Eckert and McConnell-Ginet (2013) summarise this dichotomy as “cooperative women and competitive men” (Eckert and McConnell-Ginet 2013: 38).

The “3Ds” consider gender to be a social construction that is grounded on biological sex (Cameron 2005), which “produces the language we use” (Harvey and Shalom 1997: 5, italics their own). An opposing theory developed by Foucault (1972) dismantled the structuralist bonds that confined distinct and opposing language communities as expounded by the “3Ds”. Foucault introduced a theory of body and self which asserted that categorical identities (e.g. gender, sexuality) were constructed and reproduced in discourse (Foucault 1972). His theory had an enormous impact on the development of feminist theories and theories of identity (McNay 1999), such as that of performativity developed by Butler (1990) and extended by Connell (2005).

Butler (1990) conflated the distinction between gender and sex and asserted that there is no purely natural existence: the body—and therefore the concept of sex—is, from its inception, socially constructed; or, as Salih (2002) states, “there is no sex that is not always already gender” (Salih 2002: 63). Bourdieu’s fundamental notion of performativity asserted that gender is socially and, therefore, linguistically constructed: gender is a “‘doing’ rather than a ‘being’” (Butler 1990: 25) that is not freely chosen or changed. Indeed, Butler (1993) asserted that performativity is simply “a repetition, a sedimentation, a congealment of the past” (Butler 1993: 244). A criticism of Butler’s theory of performativity (1990, 1993) is that the static and rigid view of identity performance leads to an “overemphasis on internal uniformity of gender norms” (McNay 1999: 102).\(^1\)

Connell (2005) therefore proposed that gender identities are performed but not rigid, as was asserted in Butler’s (1990, 1993) theory; rather, gender identities are freely chosen and changed. According to Connell (2005), it is impossible for a woman or a man to exist without their respective feminine and masculine identities being “constituted in discourse” (Connell 2005: 5). In this way, the area of study of language, gender and sexuality refers to the linguistic construction and performance of diverse gendered identities. In sum, language is not the product of gender: gender is the product of language. This thesis likewise assumes that gendered (and sexualised) identity is constructed through discourse, such as that produced by male advertisers on Craigslist in seeking casual sex with other men.

2.1.2 Language and Sexuality

Prior to the conceptualisation of performativity, significant linguistic research asserted the existence of linguistic and discursive features that were fundamental and exclusive to the gay community (e.g. Legman 1941; Stanley 1974; Hayes 1976). The concept of queer (and, soon after, queer linguistics) arose to challenge the heterosexual norm (Baker 2005) and to counter the reductive and structuralist perspectives of rigid dichotomous sexual orientation that prevailed. A fundamental concept developed during the queer movement is heteronormativity (Warner 1991), which posits that there exists a societally-constructed system for “organising and regulating sexuality” (Cameron and Kulick 2006: 9) and the privileged members are heterosexual.

\(^1\) Performativity draws similarities to Bourdieu’s (1990) concept of habitus as the embodiment of expectations and socially learned styles for a particular group that “mediate an individual’s actions” (Bourdieu 1990: 53) that likely reproduce and strengthen that group’s expected disposition (Bourdieu 1990) and restrict performance that is divergent from the expectation. Bourdieu’s theory differed from Butler’s theory of performativity in its assertion that habitus is an open system that is exposed to new experiences that either “reinforce or modify its structures” (Bourdieu 1992: 133), rather than solely perpetuating them.
Historically, the majority of queer linguistic research considered homosexual men to form a discrete and homogeneous group that could be “easily summarised or unified” (Butler 2004: 7). The early research on the gay community’s linguistic features (e.g. Legman 1941 et al.) reveals an underlying and covert affirmation of heteronormativity: namely, that the gay community is worthy of study because of its divergence from the norm.

As linguistic research on sexual identity has increased, the notion of sexuality has undergone a shift in contemporary usage. Sexuality is “the fact of being heterosexual, homosexual or bisexual” which is a characteristic of one’s identity, like performed gender, that “enters deeply into [one’s] sense of self” (Cameron and Kulick 2006: 2–3). According to Giddens (1992), sexuality is a property of the self that can be “reflexively grasped, interrogated and developed” (Giddens 1992: 14). Sexuality is therefore a performance (see performativity in Section 2.1 above) that produces a sexual identity. Recent research in the field of language and sexuality has been concerned principally with linguistic trends across or within communities defined by sexual orientation, such as the construction of hyper-masculine identities among homosexual men (Baker 2003, 2008, 2014), labelling within a lesbian community (Abe 2004), and the construction of butch and femme identities in films targeting lesbian viewers (Morrish and Saunston 2007). It has clearly been demonstrated that sexual identities constructed through language are a current research focal point in the field of language and sexuality.

An emerging area of study in the domain of language and sexuality research is the linguistic and discursive construction of sexualised identities (Cameron and Kulick 2003): sexualised identities are performances of sexual identities that are unique to sexual contexts and are not necessarily bound by gender (Cameron and Kulick 2003). The construction of individual sexualised identities in erotic texts has been an area of some research (e.g. Talbot 1997; Baker 2005; Morrish and Saunston 2007; Saunton & Kyratzis 2007); however, the identities constructed within these texts present highly stereotyped perspectives of masculinity and femininity in sexual contexts which are not reflective of the true diversity of sexualised identities (Baker 2005: 189). According to stereotypes of masculinity in Talbot’s (1997) research on popular romance fiction, men are defined by their role as objects of sexual desire that embody hegemonic masculinity through power and physical perfection (Talbot 1997: 107). In sum, the stereotypes of erotic novels illuminate a reductive assumption that gender and sexuality predicts sexual behaviour and that behaviour can thus be neatly categorised according to gender and sexuality.
Parker’s (1997) research on Ancient Roman sexuality identifies a different possible approach to the study of language and sexuality: one in which identities are defined by their sexual role. In his work, Parker (1997) describes how sexual behaviour was determined by activity and passivity in Ancient Roman society: men and women were assigned to rigidly prescribed roles (each expressed by a unique lexical form) that were based on a fundamental distinction of “active and passive” (Parker 1997: 48), as is summarised in Table 2.1.

Table 2.1: Ancient Roman sex roles (adapted from Parker 1997: 49)

Parker notes that it was humiliating for a man to be passive (Parker 1997), since it was a disgrace for a man to “suffer in the woman’s role” (Parker 1997: 50-52). Contemporary language of men who have sex with men similarly distinguishes sexualised identities along an axis of activity and passivity: men are labelled according to this distinction (e.g. top and bottom), with bottom being viewed stereotypically as “feminine” (Baker 2014: 113) owing to its correlation with the female role in the heterosexual paradigm (Baker 2014: 172).

It has been demonstrated that considerable research has been undertaken to investigate the linguistic construction of identities in a diversity of contexts (see Section 2.1.1). A limited subset of this research has focussed on the construction of individual identities within erotic situations—so called sexualised identities—as variations of masculinities and femininities. There has been no research, however, on the linguistic construction of relationships of two or more sexualised identities, particularly in representations of sexual acts. This thesis aims to fill that gap by exploring the use of language as a means of constructing paired identities in the context of erotic actions, using a corpus linguistics approach.

1 Considerable research in other disciplines has investigated the pervasive association of femininity with negativity, especially within masculine identities (e.g. Killianski 2001; Sánchez & Vilain 2012).
2.1.3 Corpus Approaches to Gender and Sexuality

Corpus linguistics has, in recent years, seen considerable interest in diverse linguistic fields, such as lexicography (e.g. Cermák and Kren 2005), phonology (e.g. Zuraw 2007), syntax (e.g. Smith 2014), and language variation (e.g. Laanemets 2013). However, corpus linguistic methods (detailed in Section 3.2) have only very recently been applied to sociolinguistic analyses (e.g. Baker 2003, 2005, 2008, 2014), and with very limited impact on the wider sociolinguistic field (Baker 2010: 1).

Corpus linguistic research in the field of gender and sexuality is limited, and has focussed primarily on the construction of gendered identities, such as the representation of men and women in the British press (Caldas-Coulthard and Moon 2010), the construction of feminine identities in personal-ads (Bakar 2012), and the comparison of stereotypical masculine and feminine sexualised identities in erotic texts (Baker 2008). This thesis contributes to the growing field of corpus-based sociolinguistic research by applying corpus linguistic methods to the construction of sexualised identities in personal-ads.

2.2 Selling One’s (Sexual) Identity: Personal-ads

A personal advertisement (personal-ad) is a type of advertisement in which a person describes themselves and their desires in order to attract a reader to engage in a (primarily romantic) relationship. Personal-ads were originally print-based (e.g. Jones 2000; Marley 2000; Coupland 1996), but there is now a growing domain of online personal-ads (e.g. Bakar 2012; Baker 2014). There is significant research on the genre of personal-ads; Gonzalez and Meyers (1993) agree that the genre of personal-ads is worthy of study because of the information about self- and target-presentation strategies, gender stereotypes and identity construction that is contained within personal-ads (Gonzalez and Meyers 1993).

Personal-ads, like all advertisements, are designed to sell a product (Shalom 1997). Coupland (1996) identifies two key elements as definitive of the personal-ad sub-genre: commodification of self and restriction of the buyer. In personal-ads, identity is a linguistically packaged “product in the dating marketplace” (Coupland 1996: 101) that results from the process of commodification of the self developed by Giddens (1991), in which standard consumption patterns are established and promoted through advertising which, in turn, influences the narrative construction of self identity (Giddens 1991: 197).

Both the POSTER’s and the TARGET’s identities are commodified in personal-ads. Description of the POSTER ensures the greatest number of responses from the target audience by “constructing the most attractive possible image” (Baker 2005: 136). Description of the POSTER and TARGET is very common, particularly through adjectival modification (van Compernolle 2008: 2070). Coupland (1996) asserts that the attributes used to specify POSTERS and TARGETS belong to a limited domain of semantic groupings, namely appearance, occupation and interests (Coupland 1996: 193), while Shalom (1997) suggests that all advertisers specify for appearance (Shalom 1997: 201-202). Bartholome et al. (2000) note that in male-male personal-ads, age, as well as physical appearance, are the most commonly specified attribute, followed by sexual interests and characteristics (Bartholome et al. 2000: 310), which Deaux and Hanna (1984) found to be significantly more frequently specified than among heterosexual personal-ads (Deaux and Hanna 1984: 370).

The specification of the TARGET suggests that a wider audience is expected, and can be analysed according to Bell’s (1991) theory of audience roles. At the individual text level, POSTERS of personal-ads attempt to distil their TARGET—the target audience who is both “expected and addressed” (Bell 1991: 92)—from the wider marketplace—the auditors who are “expected but not targeted” (Bell 1991: 92). This is confirmed by van Compernolle (2008), who asserts that there is an assumed one-to-one dialogue between POSTER and TARGET (van Compernolle 2008: 2073).

The dialogue between POSTER and TARGET in personal-ads follows, for the most part, a conventionalised structure which allows little room for creativity (Nair 1992). Coupland (1996: 106) asserts a prototypical structure, based on an empirical study of 100 personal-ads, as shown in Figure 2.1.

1. POSTER  2. seeks  3. TARGET
4. GOALS  5. (COMMENT)  6. REFERENCE

The prototypical structure means that there is a high degree of repetition and hence many personal-ads will appear similar, with patterns being observable in a small data-set (Baker 2005: 135). The structure is so rigid that readers are able to predict semantic structures, grammar and vocabulary because “each ad is a standard solution to a standard problem” (Stubbs 2001: 17). This structure has motivated significant linguistic research, as has been demonstrated above in the research related to specification of the POSTER and TARGET. Several means of reference to the POSTER and TARGET have been identified, including personal pronouns for address (van Compernolle 2008) and general identity-based nouns (Baker 2003) that ascribe the POSTER or TARGET to a category and objectify them (Shalom 1997: 190). Marley (2000) asserts that “choice of headword [in references] constitutes a fundamental categorization of self and other” (Marley 2000: 271). In addition to lexical choice, the syntactic arrangement of headwords and modifiers nuances the participants’ constructed identities (Marley 2000: 280).

The use of abbreviations in personal-ads similarly influences the construction of the POSTER’s and TARGET’s identities. Historically, abbreviation was connected with the cost of advertising (personal-ads being charged per character), where they would reduce the total amount of characters and therefore the total cost (Coupland 1996: 106; Baker 2003: 246). While the historical explanation is no longer suitable for justifying their use, Shalom (1997) notes that invoking standardised abbreviations creates and maintains a community of solidarity between POSTER and TARGET (Shalom 1997: 193), thereby increasing the likelihood of establishing a connection between them.

This connection is the second stage of a long process, which starts with the posting of the personal-ad, and ultimately ends with the fruition of the GOAL (Coupland 1996) (see Figure 2.1 above). This process is called a genre chain (Bazerman 1992, cited in Shalom 1997: 189) and, in the case of personal-ads, follows a paradigmatic structure (Shalom 1997: 189). The majority of linguistic research on personal-ads has focussed on the most common form of personal-ad, for which the GOAL is romantic partnership (e.g. Coupland 1996; Shalom 1997; Bartholome et al. 2000; Baker 2003, 2008, 2014). As has been demonstrated above, such a GOAL does not preclude sexual identity and references to sexual practice and interests from arising. Personal-ads for romantic partnerships are popular among heterosexual and homosexual communities (Bruthiaux 1994), which is reflected in the prominence of linguistic research examining personal-ads for romantic homosexual partnerships (e.g. Deaux and Hanna 1984; Davidson 1991; Thorne and Coupland 1998). A study by Hogben and Coupland (2000) investigated advertisements for reproductive-partners for same-sex couples. There have been no studies that have examined personal-ads for which the exclusive GOAL is casual sexual relations, despite considerable growing interest in casual sexual in other academic disciplines (e.g. Maticka-Tyndale et al. 2003; Wentland and Reissing 2011; Danube et al. 2014). The vast majority of romantic-partnership-seeking personal-ad data has been sourced from print-based newspaper classifieds, or supplementary spoken ads, while more recent research draws data from online sources, such as online dating-sites (e.g. Bakar 2012) and Craigslist (e.g. Baker 2014). The data on which Baker’s (2014) analysis was founded were collected from three separate geographically delimited sections of the worldwide online classified service Craigslist. This thesis will extend the current field of research by analysing online personal-ads for which the GOAL is casual sexual relations.

In sum, significant research has been undertaken into the construction of diverse identities based on the sexual orientation and gender identification of the POSTER and TARGET. This thesis does not follow the traditional pattern of prescribing sexual orientation to the POSTERS or auditors (see Section 3.1.1). In addition, it has been shown that the majority of research has focussed on personal-ads for romantic relationships.

2.3 Summary

This chapter has illustrated that there has been extensive research undertaken in the key fields of personal-ads and language, gender and sexuality, although few studies have employed corpus linguistic methods. This study finds itself on the significant knowledge that has been developed about the linguistic construction of identities, in particular within personal-ads, as a foundation from which it will extend the limits of this knowledge by making an original contribution to the understanding of the construction of sexualised identities. The extensive research on personal-ads among homosexuals and heterosexuals has focussed primarily on romantic relationships, with no research having been conducted on personal-ads for casual sexual relationships, despite significant growing interest in casual sexual relations in other disciplines. This study aims to fill these two gaps by exploring the use of language as a means of constructing imaginary paired sexualised identities in online personal-ads for casual sex, while contributing to the emerging field of corpus linguistic applications to the study of identity construction.
Chapter 3: Data, Methodology and Analytical Frameworks

This chapter introduces the data and methodology of my analysis. Section 3.1 will introduce the data that will drive my thesis and provide a detailed explanation of the source of the data, and the methods of collection and sanitisation. Section 3.2 will introduce corpus linguistics and explain the corpus analytical methods. Lastly, Section 3.3 will outline the analytical frameworks that underpin the qualitative analysis of the data.

3.1 Data

The data collected for this study forms a corpus—a large body of digitally-encoded real-life language data which constitutes a “standard reference” (McEnery & Wilson 1996: 24) for a particular genre under investigation. The data source, and collection and sanitisation methods are outlined below.

3.1.1 Data Source

This thesis uses personal advertisements from the Craigslist Sydney website, following the research of romantic personal-ads on Craigslist by Baker (2014).¹ The data are restricted to advertisements posted within a single, yet sufficiently large and diverse, geographic community (Sydney) for two reasons: first, to eliminate any possible differences that might arise from significant geographic separation; second, to take clear advantage of the diversity of identities within the gay community of Sydney owing to its status as an significant city on the gay map (Markwell 2002).²

The organisational structure of Craigslist (Figure 3.1) demonstrates the diversity of goals of personal-ads (see Section 2.2).

¹ Craigslist Australia has separate subdomains for each of the capital cities within Australia, as well as a subdomain for Wollongong NSW and for Newcastle NSW. Craigslist Sydney is located at http://sydney.craigslist.com.au
² While the men-for-men category from which the data are sourced is not exclusively comprised of gay men, this is the category under which these men would post personal-ads. Hence, the status of Sydney within the gay community is significant.
Personals-ads are categorised according to the goal of the post: romantic relationships, platonic relationships and casual sexual relationships comprise the personals section. While there has been a growing interest in the study of casual sexual relations in the wider academic community in the last decade (e.g. Maticka-Tyndale et al. 2003; Wentland and Reissing 2011; Danube et al. 2014), there have been no linguistic studies on casual sex. As a result of this, this study uses the personal-ads for casual sex (from the casual encounters section) as a source of linguistic data.

The focus on personal-ads for casual sex constitutes a considerable shift from previous research which has focussed primarily on personal-ads for romantic partnerships (e.g. Coupland 1996; Shalom 1997; Bartholome et al. 2000), including research on gay men’s romantic relationships (e.g. Jones 2000; Baker 2003) as well as the only linguistic study on romantic relationships on Craigslist (Baker 2014). Casual encounter ads can be subdivided further according to the identified gender of the advertiser and of the desired target. Previous behavioural science research has identified that men have more positive attitudes than women towards engagement in casual sexual relations (Peterson and Hyde 2010). Further, male-to-male personal-ads have been shown to feature the greatest proportion of attributes specifying sexual interests and practices (Bartholome et al. 2000; Deaux and Hanna 1984). Consequently, this thesis examines only those advertisements that are posted by gender-identifying men who seek casual sexual relations with gender-identifying men (m4m). The POSTERS are not defined by any prescribed gender or sexual orientation; categories on Craigslist are defined by gender-identification and attraction rather than according to sociological notions of homosexuality or heterosexuality.

Each advertisement features two distinct yet related texts: a header line, and, after a paragraph break, the main body text. The header line contains optional meta-data (e.g. age and location of the POSTER, and the date of posting) and a title that summarises the contents of the main text. The main body text is the main advertising content that will be analysed in this study. Figure 3.2 demonstrates an example text, showing header (bolded) and main body text below it.

3.1.2 Data Collection

Following Baker (2014), I used HTTrack\(^1\) to save local copies of the m4m casual encounters section of Craigslist Sydney. Personal-ads remain online for 75 days, after which point they become inaccessible. I copied all the ads that were available between January 5 and March 21 2014, which amounted to 8,425 texts. Each ad was saved as a .html webpage which included not only the header line and body text, but also boilerplate material such as navigation to other sections of the website (see Appendix 1 for an example). Each file was saved as the original server-side filename, which is a unique 10-digit number.

3.1.3 Data Sanitisation

A python script (see Appendix 2) and a bash script (see Appendix 3) batch-striped each .html file of the boilerplate material and outputted the sanitised body text to a file of the same name, appended with .txt file extension. I chose to ignore the meta-data variables (i.e. age and location) since this thesis seeks to describe the construction of relationships of power and

\(^1\) HTTrack: http://www.httrack.com intimacy for all identities within Craigslist m4m casual encounters personal-ads, regardless of differences in their location within Sydney or in their age.¹

The size of the working corpus was reduced by including only the most recent 1,000 personal-ads in order to make it manageable (Baker 2006: 30). Following Baker (2014), I removed duplicates from the working corpus in order to reduce the likelihood of skewed results: firstly, a preliminary n-gram search, with minimum frequency set to 5, revealed a considerable number of duplicate or quasi-duplicate texts.² I then used CopyCatch Investigator³ software to identify similar texts within the working corpus, based on lexical items and their grammatical positions. Duplicates with absolute identity were excluded from the working corpus, while files with >65% identity were manually verified.⁴ It was important to eliminate quasi-duplicates that were presumably written by a single POSTER because the presence of multiple instances of lexical items within grammatically similar environments could skew the results to suggest saliency as a result of frequency (Baker 2014: 160). The anonymity of Craigslist users renders it impossible to determine whether two advertisements are similar by virtue only of their shared genre, or whether their similarities derive from being composed by a single author. In these instances, I considered the grammatical structure and vocabulary of each text and evaluated the possibility that they were personal-ads written by unique authors. Most of the texts with >65% identity were judged to be quasi-duplicates; in these cases, the shorter text was excluded from the working corpus in order to have as many unique grammatical constructions and lexical items represented. In total, 129 texts were deleted from the working corpus owing to being considered duplicates or quasi-duplicates. Figure 3.3 demonstrates two quasi-duplicates that were determined to be written by a single author; the text on the left was excluded form the corpus.

¹ In addition, age and location data are inconsistently provided, and it is impossible to know if the data reflect the POSTERS’ real age and location. Location could possibly be a particularly salient indicator of social class, though it would be difficult to verify the correlation. It would therefore be difficult, and perhaps meaningless, to compare across these variables.
² An n-gram is a contiguous sequence of n tokens.
³ CopyCatch: http://www.cfsoftware.com/Investigator.html
Finally, it is possible for Craigslist advertisements to be miscategorised, or to be published in multiple categories in order to increase exposure. Advertisements for drugs, accommodation and massage were infrequent, but present.\(^1\) Many of these advertisements included erotic reference, and therefore remain in the corpus; those without erotic reference were excluded. In total, 5 texts were excluded from the m4m corpus because of miscategorisation.

There are a total of 866 texts and 46,826 words in the sanitised m4m corpus (see Appendix 4). As Table 3.1 illustrates, the average length of the texts is 54.1 words, with a median text length of 43 words. The texts within the m4m corpus are “colony texts” (Hoey 1986: 1) which stand alone as discrete and individual texts that do not need to be particularly long to be meaningful (Baker 2006: 29). The corpus is a small, specialised corpus which is representative of the language use within a genre (Leech 1991: 11) and can be “used to study features of it” (Baker 2006: 26). It is more than double the size of Shalom’s (1997) specialised corpus and includes a large number of discrete texts. Further, given the high degree of repetition associated with the genre of personal-ads (as outlined in Section 2.2), linguistic patterns will be observable in a small corpus (Baker 2005: 135).

\(^1\) Drugs were predominately referred to by the cultural reference “420”. Advertisements for massage included genuine amateur erotic massages and professional erotic massages; given the nature of both types as erotic, all massage advertisements remain in the corpus.

3.2 Methodology

This thesis uses a two-pronged—quantitative and qualitative—approach to analysis. It is widely agreed that a two-pronged approach can overcome the issues encountered in the use of just one of these approaches (see Section 3.3.1 below), allowing a richer and more precise analysis that is empirically valid (e.g. Stubbs 1996; McEnery & Wilson 1996).

3.2.1 Corpus Linguistics

Corpus methodology has distinct advantages over a purely qualitative approach. Firstly, large quantities of data can be considered at once. Käding (1897) analysed vowels in German from an eleven-million-word corpus, without the aid of a computer (Käding 1897, cited in McEnery & Wilson 1996), which represents an unfeasible method of conducting research because it is “slow, expensive and prone to error” (McEnery and Wilson 1996: 10). Instead, personal computers are now able to sort, retrieve and calculate linguistic data in a few moments: they facilitate a methodology that is fast, affordable and less error-prone.

Further, the patterns of language use within a corpus are exposed by methods of measurement which are grounded in statistics (Baker 2011: 19) that are verifiable (Leech 1992). This is not to say that quantitative methods are without disadvantage: McEnery & Wilson (1996) argue that the quantitative analyses produce results that are “necessarily less rich” than those obtained through qualitative means (McEnery & Wilson 1996: 63). Through combining quantitative and qualitative analyses, this thesis hopes to overcome this limitation to some extent.
3.2.2 Corpus Linguistic Methods

I will draw on several well-established corpus methods (e.g. Stubbs 2001; Baker 2006) to quantify the qualitative analysis, and guide my analysis. Following Baker (2014), I use the freeware AntConc1 to perform the corpus analyses. The methods used in this thesis are outlined below.

3.2.2.1 Frequency List

A frequency list ranks all of the tokens of a corpus according to how frequently they appear. Frequency lists can be interpreted as representations of typicality since members of a speech community have a tacit understanding of behavioural norms and their language use reproduces and strengthens typical language use (Stubbs 2001: 16). This typicality defines the “lexical focus” (Baker 2006: 121) of the corpus which underpins the direction of the research. Morphologically related words (e.g. the conjugated forms of a verb) are treated as distinct tokens in AntConc, but there is an option to load a lemma list so that the corpus is lemmatised and inflected words are considered to be instances of a single token. I downloaded Yasumasa Someya’s lemma list (without hyphens)2 and added to it words and abbreviations that I anticipated would be abbreviated frequently:

- bottom → bottoms, bottoming, bottomed, btm, bttm, botm, bottm, bttom
- top → tops, topping, topped
- dom → dominant
- sub → submissive
- you → u, yu
- your → ur, yr

It is impossible to predict which words should be added to the lemma list, but I considered the words above to be crucial additions, owing to their contextual significance and their irregularity. The use of abbreviations signals membership to a specific community and creates solidarity between POSTER and TARGET (Shalom 1997: 193). In this corpus, the use of terms such as dom and sub indicates membership to the male-male attracted community.

2 The lemma list (no-hyphen) is published on the AntConc website: http://www.laurenceanthony.net/software/resources
3.2.2.2 Collocation

Collocation is the characteristic co-occurrence of patterns of words (Firth 1957, cited in Xiao and McEnery 2006: 105). Collocation tests measure the probability that two words are not randomly co-occurring, and hence significantly associated, by comparing their expected co-occurrence with the actual frequency of their co-occurrence (Cheng 2012: 94), and are widely accepted as a statistical test (e.g. Sinclair 1991, Stubbs 1995, Hunston 2002). The collocation measure used in this thesis is the Mutual Information (MI) score, which, in spite of being known to “unduly overvalue infrequent words” (Xiao and McEnery 2006: 105), is not adversely affected by small corpus size as much as the other collocation measure (Hunston 2002: 73). An MI>3 predicts collocation (Hunston 2002).

Parameters for collocation testing are span and minimum frequency: minimum frequency is a threshold number for the number of instances of a particular co-occurrence; span refers to how far apart the potential collocate can be from the node word. To compensate for the fact that the MI function emphasises low-frequency patterns (Xiao and McEnery 2006), the minimum frequency parameter is set to five (5) in order to eliminate patterns that appear infrequently that are incorrectly predicted as collocates.

3.2.2.3 Concordancing

Concordancing displays the co-text of a node word or search term within a corpus. It is a visual tool that can be used to identify key patterns or structures, or to explore the significance of word patterns (Baker 2006) by alphabetically sorting the concordance lines by the co-text. The analysis of concordances helps to reveal the context in which patterns appear (Baker 2014), which will prove useful in this thesis by facilitating identification of the POSTERS’ and TARGETS’ semantic roles within the texts. Example concordances in Figure 3.4 show concordancing revealing the pattern cock sucked, in context, in the m4m corpus.
3.3 Analytical Frameworks

This thesis utilises quantitative and qualitative approaches to analysing the data for constructions of relationships of power, pleasure and intimacy. There will be two qualitative frameworks for analysis: semantic role theory in the domain of verb semantics will be used to analyse power and pleasure, while social role theory will be used to analyse intimacy.

3.3.1 Power, Pleasure and Semantic Role Theory

The linguistic analysis of power has traditionally fallen within the scope of Critical Discourse Analysis (CDA), which analyses the language use of the powerful as a means of reproducing their domination and perpetuating the inequalities for which they are responsible (Fairclough 1989): in short, language reflects power (Wodak 2009). In the texts of this corpus, the participants are anonymous and treated as ‘classless’, owing to the fact that there is no access to class variable data, nor is the limited geographical suburb data sufficiently indicative of class. Because of the anonymity and classlessness, the language of Craigslist ads necessarily defines and constructs power ex nihilo rather than creating and perpetuating pre-existent power hierarchies in socially-classed systems. I have chosen to analyse the data within the theory of semantic roles since the relationship between agency and power is well established in Systemic Functional Linguistic (SFL) transitivity analyses (e.g. Fowler and Kress 1979; Goatly 2002; Lukin et al. 2004; Wodak 2009). However, since this thesis is not located within SFL, it does not apply an SFL-based transitivity analysis.

The participants of social interaction are represented by semantic roles (Cook 1989) according to their relationship to the verb. What is traditionally referred to as the grammatical subject of an active verb is semantically interpreted as one of several roles based on the way that a specific verb interacts with that participant. According to Carnie (2007), the Agent is the initiator of the action of the verb; the Beneficiary is the one for whose benefit the action takes place; the Experiencer is the entity who feels or perceives something; the Patient undergoes the action of the verb or is perceived, experienced or moved. Given the nature of erotic verbs, in which an action is primarily performed by one participant on another, the semantic roles of Agent and Patient will form a primary focus of this thesis. The semantic roles of Experiencer and Beneficiary will also be analysed for sexual pleasure in the context of expressions of desire and climax, respectively.

Traditional SFL and CDA interpretations of transitivity associate power with agency: the Actor (or Agent in semantic role theory) is ranked as more powerful than the Affected (or Patient in semantic role theory) (e.g. Goatly 2002). This is because an action is brought about by the Agent, and this causation is explicit (Lukin et al. 2004). However, not all Agents are equally powerful; verb transitivity influences power, such that Agents of intransitive verbs are less powerful than their counterparts of transitive verbs (Goatly 2002: 7). Similarly, this study’s semantic role analysis takes into account the meanings of verbs and their co-textual environment in defining the participants’ power relations. Thus, the Agent is not necessarily always the most powerful participant. Chapter 4 outlines how power relations can be shifted through expressions of authority and mutual agency.

3.3.2 Intimacy and Social Actor Theory

Social actors are the participants of a social interaction (van Leeuwen 2008: 23), and their linguistic representation can extend beyond that of the Agent-Patient relationship outlined above. Van Leeuwen (2008) developed a sociosemantic inventory to analyse the representation of social actors in texts. A subset of this complex inventory will be employed here to understand the various ways in which participants of erotic acts—and their relationships to each other—are represented through discourse. The tools which I will utilise are introduced below with examples from van Leeuwen (2008), where possible.

3.3.2.1 Exclusion: Backgrounding and Suppression

Exclusion is the process by which a social actor who is responsible for the performance of an action is not explicitly referenced in the main verbal clause. Exclusion can be divided into two categories: backgrounding and suppression. Van Leeuwen (2008) defines backgrounding to be the process by which the social actor is not mentioned explicitly in relation to the main action, but is mentioned elsewhere in the text, while suppression is the lack of any reference to the social actor responsible for the action. I will extend van Leeuwen’s (2008) theory of backgrounding to distinguish two distinct forms of backgrounded participant: explicit backgrounding and implicit backgrounding. Explicit backgrounding is the overt expression of the backgrounded social actor through lexical items or personal pronoun. Implicit backgrounding, on the other hand, is the implied representation of the backgrounded social actor, such as through imperative constructions or null-subject verbs. Implicit backgrounding constitute a more extreme form of backgrounding than explicit backgrounding. Chapter 5 will present examples of implicit and explicit backgrounding as well as suppression.

Where actors in erotic interactions are not excluded (suppressed or backgrounded), they can be represented as personalised or impersonalised participants, as indeterminate or differentiated entities, and as functionalised identities.

3.3.2.2 Personalisation and Impersonalisation

Personalisation is the process by which a social actor is represented as a human being, by means of nouns or adjectives that contain the semantic feature “human”, e.g. “maternal care” (van Leeuwen 2008: 46). In addition, this analysis will include personal pronouns that represent such a noun as personalising. Contrarily, impersonalisation is where a social actor is not represented as a human, by means of abstract nouns or concrete nouns that do not contain the semantic feature “human”, e.g. “changing face of Australia” (van Leeuwen 2008: 46). The effect of impersonalisation is the backgrounding of the role and identity of the impersonalised actor (van Leeuwen 2008: 46). Objectivation is a subtype of impersonalisation whereby a social actor is represented through metonymical reference, whereby a thing closely associated with the person represents his whole (van Leeuwen 2008: 46). A subtype of objectivation that is particularly relevant for this analysis is somatisation, a process in which a body part stands as the representation of the social actor, e.g. “she put her hand on Mary Kate’s shoulder” (van Leeuwen 2008: 47). Somatised nouns that are preceded by a possessive pronoun or genitive construction are possessivated, as seen in the previous example (van Leeuwen 2008: 47) and relate back to the person of which they form a part. Van Leeuwen (2008) does not suggest a name for non-possessivated somatised nouns; for ease of comprehension, I will call the process that produces these “complete somatisation”.

3.3.2.3 Differentiation and Indetermination

Social actors can be represented as a specific individual or as an indeterminate member of a class. Differentiation is the process in which an anonymous and generic social actor’s identity is specified, either through relative clauses or adjectival modification, e.g. “‘uptown’ people in American terminology” (van Leeuwen 2008: 40). In contrast, indetermination is the process where social actors are represented as anonymised and unspecified individuals, e.g. “someone had put flowers on the teacher’s desk” (van Leeuwen 2008: 39). It has the effect of anonymising the social actor and rendering their identity as insignificant (van Leeuwen 2008: 40).

3.3.2.4 Functionalisation

Functionalisation is the process whereby social actors are represented through their performance of a role or activity rather than through characteristics of their person or character, e.g. “interviewer”, “celebrant” or “guardian” (van Leeuwen 2008: 42). In the context of erotic interactions, functionalisation is primarily observed in sexual role labels, such as top and bottom, which are derived from the role an actor will play during sexual intercourse.

3.4 Summary

This chapter has outlined the research design of this thesis. It has defined and justified in Section 3.1 the choice of data source and methods of collection and sanitisation. The corpus methods introduced in Section 3.2 will form the basis of the quantitative approach to analysis. These techniques will elucidate significant trends in the data and provide an empirical basis for the richness afforded by the qualitative interpretations. The analytical frameworks introduced in Section 3.3 will found the analysis of the corpus data, firstly through semantic role theory within verb semantics in Chapter 4, and secondly through the social actor representations framework in Chapter 5. In combining quantitative and qualitative analyses, this thesis will identify the salient means of constructing sexualised identities defined by power, pleasure and intimacy.
Chapter 4: Power and Pleasure in Semantic Roles

This chapter examines several linguistic means of constructing pleased and powerful sexualised identities in Craigslist men-for-men personal-ads for casual sex, and how the constructed identities of the POSTERS and TARGETS together form power relations.

Sex derives pleasure (Leigh 1989; Hill & Preston 1996), which is one of the most important, and most obvious, motivators for the performance of sexual acts (Meston & Buss 2007: 477). In this analysis, pleasure is a general term that reflects the imaginary satisfaction derived from the performance of sexual acts, as well as the appreciation of and attitude towards sexual practices. Sexual pleasure is unidirectional and not relational: it is not expressed as a hierarchy where the available sexual pleasure for distribution is finite; rather, each participant can be constructed as sexually pleased without necessarily influencing the sexual pleasure of the other. As will be argued, sexual pleasure is derived primarily from the experience of orgasm in sexual acts represented by erotic verbs. Further, this chapter will propose that erotic verbs encode pleasure to semantic roles differently. In addition, there are linguistic strategies through which imaginary pleasure and satisfaction can be expressed, such as construction of mutual agency, overt expressions for sexual climax, and expressions of desire. The use of these strategies influences the sexual pleasure of the participants, which reflects the extent to which the identities are constructed as appreciative of and desiring sexual satisfaction.

In addition to sexual pleasure, it has been argued that participants pursue sex to feel powerful (Hill & Preston 1996; Meston & Buss 2007). Consequently, this chapter will examine the construction of power, between sexualised identities constructed in the texts. Authoritative power is the power to control behaviour of other people (Fowler and Kress 1979: 26); in this case, it is the power to control the course of a sexual interaction. Authoritative power is relational: it is expressed as a hierarchy that defines the relative positions of each participant. Authoritative power is therefore asymmetrical—both participants cannot be simultaneously empowered or disempowered, and the empowerment of one participant necessarily disempowers the other. At the level of the genre, each text represents a set of defined rules for a proposed sexual interaction that can either be accepted, through responding to the ad, or rejected, through ignoring the ad; in this way, the application of power is unidirectional: there is “no hint of negotiation of control” (Fowler and Kress 1979: 27). At the level of the individual texts, each specific sexual act represented by an erotic verb is a negotiation of control between POSTER and TARGET: power is therefore bidirectional and open to negotiation at this level. This analysis will focus primarily on power at the level of the individual text. While there is inherent power in Agency (cf. SFL and CDA analyses: e.g. Fowler and Kress 1979; Lukin et al. 2004; Wodak 2009), there are linguistic constructions in the m4m corpus, such as appeals to authority, and the construction of mutual agency, that modify power structures. These constructions modify the construction of power hierarchies between the Agent and Patient which are established through agency.

For reasons of scope, this analysis cannot cover all of the diverse strategies for constructing and modifying power. This chapter will therefore investigate the construction and negotiation of pleasure and power in 4 linguistic strategies. Section 4.1 will introduce the salient erotic verbs found in Craigslist men-for-men personal-ads for casual sex. Section 4.2 will examine the expression of climax as a means of heightening sexual pleasure, while Section 4.3 will explore constructions of authority and how they influence power hierarchies, and Section 4.4 will examine the use of expressions of desire in constructing attitudes and inclinations toward sexual acts. Section 4.5 will discuss mutual agency and how it positively influences sexual pleasure and power. Finally, Section 4.6 will summarise the findings of the analysis of semantic roles in their co-textual environments.

4.1 Erotic Verbs

Erotic verbs are the verbs that refer to sexual activity in the m4m corpus. A lemmatised frequency list (see Appendix 5) of the m4m corpus reveals the most frequently occurring verbs of sexual practice, and a concordance plot of these verbs reveals the proportion of texts within the corpus which contain at least one instance of the erotic verbs. As Table 4.1 illustrates, the most salient erotic verbs are SUCK, FUCK, PLAY and BLOW, which appear in more than half (51%) of advertisements.

Table 4.1: Frequency and distribution of erotic verbs

Suck is the most frequently occurring erotic verb in m4m Craigslist advertisements for casual sex, and occurs at least once in more than one-quarter (26.8%) of the advertisements. It denotes the action of fellatio; examples of suck are shown in (1)—(2) below. The subject of Suck is the Agent, and the optional object is the Patient.

(1) Like to suck cock in the bush near my place
(2) Let me start sucking and gagging on your cock

Suck can be used with the particle off to form a phrasal verb (Matthews 2007) Suck off, as seen in examples (3)—(4) below.

(3) Looking to suck off a fit guy.
(4) Looking for a guy to suck me off

Suck off is semantically related to Suck—it denotes the action of fellatio—except it carries with it an implied result of inducing orgasm which is not found in the base verb. The two verbs differ also in the semantic restrictions of their objects. Concordancing of Suck reveals that the object of the particle phrasal verb is semantically restricted to humans, while the object of the base verb is not forcefully restricted to body parts, though this is the preferred semantic domain. This can be seen in the example concordances in Figure 4.1. Concordancing with context word off in horizon 5L to 5R (see Appendix 6) indicates that there are only 26 instances of the phrasal verb, accounting for only 9.4% of total instances of the verb Suck.
. Looking for a guy to suck me off or let me suck me off until I blow. GWM 178c 89k loves to suck cock or be sucked & more if you wish, up a nice good fuck and cock. I also enjoy being guys to rim my asshole, suck my cock and take my cock dry. I wanna horny today, anyone want to come around here just to suck my cock? I am 19, slim, suck my cock in westpoint or suck my cock, lick my balls & suck my cock, nothing in retur suck my cock or me fuck. I would like that you suck my dick and fuck me. I would prefer t timer/Inexperienced male to suck my dick. I would prefer

FUCK and PLAY are the next most frequent erotic verbs in the m4m corpus, each occurring at least once in 13% of advertisements. PLAY is a euphemistic expression whose referent—the specific object for which it stands on this particular invocation (Riemer 2010: 17)—is a non-specific sexual activity, which can be inferred from the genre of personal-ads for casual sex in which it is found. The sense of PLAY is, however, not necessarily sexual in nature: it is suggestive of fun and games and camaraderie, particularly those experienced in youth. In this way, PLAY highlights the pleasure and enjoyment that can be experienced through sexual activity. PLAY is primarily seen in the m4m corpus without objects or adjuncts, as is shown in example (5). The subject of PLAY is an Agent.

(5) I'm very inexperienced but am keen to play

PLAY is used in another way in the m4m corpus: there are 40 instances of PLAY followed by the prepositional-phrase “with + noun phrase”. Concordancing of PLAY reveals that the head noun inside these noun-phrases is most frequently from the semantic domains of either human referents or their body parts, as is shown in the example concordances in Figure 4.2.
There are two possible interpretations of the syntax of play + with: verb followed by a prepositional phrase (as analysed above), or phrasal verb. When used as a phrasal verb, PLAY refers to the action of touching or moving an object (OED). The concordances in Figure 4.2 suggest that the object of PLAY WITH is semantically restricted to body parts. The object of PLAY WITH is the Patient, as is shown in example (6) below.

(6) come to my house and play with my cock

The noun-phrase within the prepositional-phrase following PLAY is not traditionally assigned a semantic role, since it is an adjunct to the verb and it does not grammatically participate in the action. However, there is a semantic relationship between this noun and the subject of the verb, and so it is possible to define the noun’s semantic role as Patient, as is shown in example (7).

(7) hang in bed and i’ll [sic] lightly play with you

FUCK refers to the action of penetrative anal intercourse; examples of FUCK are shown in (8)—(9) below. The subject is the Agent and the optional object is the Patient.

(8) looking to be fucked hard by one or more men
(9) Come fuck my virgin ass?

The object of FUCK is semantically restricted to orifices, such as ass in (9), or to their holonymical references, such as implied subject pronoun I in (8). As with SUCK above, FUCK can be joined with prepositions around to form a prepositional phrasal verb FUCK AROUND. It does not denote the same sexual practice as FUCK; it is a euphemism whose sense is similar to that of PLAY, and whose referent is, like PLAY, a non-specific sexual activity. It is an infrequently occurring verb, appearing once in the m4m corpus; it is shown in example (10).

(10) want to fuck around with a guy

Concordancing of FUCK, sorted to 1L, reveals another derived verb: FACE FUCK (see Appendix 7). The sexual practice evoked by the verb is a composite of fellatio and penetrative intercourse, such that the penetrating participant inserts his penis into the mouth of the other participant. In this way, it is a semantic cross-over of SUCK and FUCK. An example of FACE FUCK is shown in example (11) below. It is a relatively uncommon derivative, occurring only 10 times in the m4m corpus.

(11) while you face fuck me forcefull[y]

BLOW is the least frequent of the four erotic verbs analysed in the m4m corpus, appearing in only 1% of advertisements. BLOW is semantically and grammatically diverse, and refers to one of two distinct but related sexual actions. The first referent of BLOW is to orgasm—or, specifically, to ejaculate—as is shown in examples (12)—(13). It is a euphemism whose sense is aligned to explosion, derived perhaps from the explosive nature of male ejaculation. This use of BLOW accounts for 44 (46.3%) of the total instances of BLOW, and is therefore the less common secondary sense. The subject of this verb is the Experiencer, since he experiences the action of ejaculation without consciously controlling its performance.

(12) let me suck you off until you blow
(13) and let you blow your load

BLOW can either be used intransitively, as in (12), or transitively (with the noun load), as in (13). Concordancing with context word load and horizon 5L to 5R (see Appendix 8) reveals that there are 10 instances of BLOW + load accounting for 11% of the instances of this verb. This usage of BLOW + load, as in (13), suggest that the action is actively controlled, since the elided participant provides permission (through and let) for the actor to perform the action. The subject of this particular use of BLOW will by interpreted as Agent.

The second referent of BLOW is semantically related to the first: it refers to the sexual action that is synonymous with the phrasal verb SUCK OFF, meaning to perform fellatio until orgasm is achieved.\(^1\) It is used transitively, as is shown in example (14). This sense accounts for 51 (53.7%) of the total instances of BLOW, and is therefore the more common primary sense. In this case, the subject of the verb is the Agent and the object is the Patient.

(14) I walk in, blow you, then leave.

The semantic role allocation to participants of erotic verbs determines the distribution of power. At the genre-level, this allocation empowers the POSTER who controls the manipulation of the text-level distribution of power. At the text-level, the Agent, who is the main actor responsible for the performance of the act and who is capable of withholding that performance, is powerful, while the Patient is performed on and hence is disempowered (cf. Fowler and Kress 1979). This aligns with a SFL transitivity analysis in which agency equates to power (Wodak 2009; Goatly 2002). In contrast, the Experiencer undergoes an experience of feeling or sensation that is out of his conscious control (see Section 3.3.1) and hence is not empowered. As Table 4.2 illustrates, posters of Craigslist ads more frequently position themselves in the powerful Agent role than constructing the TARGET as the powerful participant.

\(^1\) There is a noun derived from this referent of BLOW: blowjob. In spite of its relevance to erotic verbs, it is outside the scope of this chapter and will not be analysed.

POSTER allocation to Agent role is most prevalent with the erotic verb SUCK, occurring in 177 of 210 (84%) of all instances of agency, which significantly contributes to the overall prominence of assignments of POSTER to the role of Agent. The distribution of agency is not, however, consistent across erotic verbs: the majority of instances BLOW (21 of the total 30 = 70%) have the POSTER as the sole Agent, while the majority of instances of FUCK position the TARGET as the powerful Agent (40 of the total 61 = 66%). There are equal proportions of Agent roles among POSTERS and TARGETS with the erotic verb PLAY. In sum, POSTERS more often assign themselves to the Agent role (70%), rather than the Patient role (30%), thereby constructing an identity that is powerfully positioned above the TARGET’s constructed identity.

4.2 Expressions of Climax

Pleasure is derived from sexual acts (Leigh 1989; Hill & Preston 1996) which are represented by erotic verbs in the m4m corpus. Pleasure is therefore achieved through the imaginary performance of erotic verbs, even when an overt expression of satisfaction is lacking. Some researchers have asserted that men are primarily motivated by physical release (e.g. Carroll, Volk & Hyde 1985; Leigh 1989), while Meston & Buss (2007) have found that men prominently endorse items relating to orgasm in particular as motivators for pursuing sex (Meston & Buss 2007: 500). Consequently, this section proposes that the degree of sexual pleasure experienced by a constructed identity is primarily determined by that identity’s reaching orgasm. In this analysis, this semantic role of Beneficiary (see Section 3.3.1) will be applied to the participant who derives pleasure from the experience of climax. Climax can be implicit in the erotic verb, as shown in example (15), or it can be explicit, as shown in example (16).
(15) I would like to get sucked and fuck you
(16) Slide your cock in and fuck me till you cum

The expression of climax in (16) overtly acknowledges the ultimate goal of the sexual act, which is implied in (15). The construction of the verb fuck in (16) with an adverbial clause till you cum also suggests that the action is complete and ends upon fulfilling the action within the adverbial clause. In this way, the action referred to by FUCK is centred around the climax of the Agent rather than the Patient. It is the Beneficiary of the climax—whether implicit or explicit—who is imagined as satisfied by the erotic act and hence bestowed with sexual pleasure. In the case of the erotic verb FUCK, it is the Agent—the insertive participant—who is constructed as sexually pleasured. The explicit reference to orgasm in (16) heightens the sexual pleasure of the Beneficiary, since the climax—and his satisfaction—becomes the focal point of the linguistic representation of the action. The erotic verb SUCK functions in a similar way: the climactic goal can either be implicit, as shown in example (15) above, or explicit, as shown in example (17) below.

(17) I’ll suck your cock & balls to completion

In contrast to FUCK, SUCK denotes an action which has the climax of the Patient as its ultimate goal and hence the Beneficiary of sexual pleasure. This can be seen in (17), in which the Agent performs the action to completion—a euphemism for climax—on the Patient. The explicit reference to climax similarly emphasises the pleasurable goal and hence heightens the Patient’s constructed identity of sexual pleasure. The Agent therefore performs the act for the pleasure of the Beneficiary, which supports the findings from the psychological field of research that pleasing a partner is a primary motivator of performing sex (e.g. Leigh 1989; Hill & Preston 1996). The climactic goal can be expressed in several ways. Examples of explicit climax are shown in (16) and (17) above, and (18)—(20) below.

(18) fuck me till you blow
(19) will suck and swallow
(20) Im [sic] keen to suck you off

Example (16) expresses the climactic goal cum in an adverbial clause introduced by till; similarly, (18) expresses the experience of climax blow in the same adverbial manner. Example
(17) expresses the same goal through completion through a prepositional-phrase introduced by to. The goal is embedded in (20) within the particle off in the erotic particle phrasal verb suck off (see Section 4.1.1), while climax is implied in (19), since the erotic verb swallow necessitates the presence of ejaculate.

The two referents of the erotic verb BLOW have the action of orgasm embedded in the verb, as outlined above in Section 4.1.1. The primary referent of BLOW—fellatio to the point of ejaculation—implicitly expresses the climactic goal and thus emphasises the imaginary satisfaction of the Beneficiary: in this case, it is the Patient of BLOW who is sexually pleasured, as is shown in example (21).

(21)  Let me blow you and go

The secondary referent of BLOW—to ejaculate—refers solely to the performance of climax. It differs from the other erotic verbs in that the means to the goal are not encoded in the verb, as is shown in example (22).

(22)  looking for a guy to suck and blow into my mouth

BLOW acts as an ending to one or more erotic actions, denoting that the climactic goal has been achieved, as in (20) where it is used intransitively and signifies the completion of the sexual act suck. It is often seen within adverbial clauses introduced by till, as discussed above. In addition, it is used in conjunction with other erotic verbs in order to signify the successful completion of the main sexual action. However, the climactic goal can be overtly expressed in transitive constructions BLOW + load, as shown in example (23).

(23)  have me work your cock and balls till you blow the most amazing load.

Transitive use of the secondary referent of BLOW, as in (23), emphasises the climactic goal by its being made overt and hence strengthens the predicted satisfaction of the Beneficiary of the orgasm. The erotic verb PLAY has the euphemistic referent of ambiguous sexual activity, as discussed in Section 4.1.1 above; there are no instances of overt expression of a climactic goal with PLAY. This can be explained, in part, by the fact that the sexual action denoted by PLAY is not clearly defined and it is incongruous to define the goal of an action that is not fully known.
It is reasonable to assert that the participant who performs the action for the sake of the Beneficiary’s climax (following the definitions above) also derives sexual pleasure from the erotic act: for what other reason would they willingly perform the action than to experience pleasure? It is worth noting, however, that there are no instances of overt expressions of climax of the Agent of SUCK or BLOW, or the Patient of the erotic verb FUCK. This disregard for the satisfaction of the participant not assigned to the Beneficiary role demonstrates how POSTERS in male-male personal-ads for casual sex construct imaginary sexual encounters where the traditional Beneficiary of the sexual act (as outlined above) is the only participant whose pleasure is linguistically constructed.

The proportion of overt expressions of the Beneficiary’s climax through erotic action is dependent on the erotic verb. As Table 4.3 illustrates, overt references to climax are largely uncommon within the m4m corpus, and SUCK and BLOW have the greatest number of explicit references to climax, while FUCK and PLAY have relatively few.

Table 4.3: Explicit expressions of climax of traditional Beneficiary in erotic verbs with Agents

Expressions of climax occur proportionately most frequently with the verb SUCK AND BLOW (26% and 30% respectively), while no expressions occur with PLAY. The prevalence of expressions of climax with SUCK and BLOW could possibly be explained by the physical proximity between the ejaculate and the facial sensory systems of the Agent during the sexual act, which promotes the viability of the Agent’s experiencing (through sight, touch, or taste) the climax. In contrast, the lack of expressions of climax with PLAY could possibly be explained by the euphemistic sense of the verb which does not include the semantic feature “sexual”.

The assignment of the POSTER to the Agent role of SUCK and BLOW—the semantic roles in which the derivation of satisfaction is never linguistically explicit—is the most commonly occurring type of assignment (see Table 4.2 above), embedding the POSTER in a role in which his sexual pleasure is undefined and never linguistically constructed. By contrast, FUCK rarely co-occurs with expressions for climax, and never when the POSTER is the insertive participant (the Agent) who derives sexual pleasure. For this verb, there are half as many POSTERS assigned to the role of Agent as there are to the role of Patient (see Table 4.2 above).

Thus, it could be argued that the POSTERS of personal-ads for casual sex on Craigslist are, more often than not, characterised by self-assignment to the service roles in sexual practice, which aligns with findings that partner-pleasing is a key motivator for sex (Leigh 1989; Hill & Preston 1996). In this way, the POSTERS construct themselves as partner-pleasers rather than as identities of heightened sexual pleasure through assignment to the Beneficiary role with possible overt expressions of climax.

4.3 Appeals to Authority

The use of authority through commands has been found to be a significant tactic among men to influence sexual interaction (Howard et al. 1986: 105). At the genre-level, there is no need to explicitly request permission for any imaginary sexual acts, since a reader of the personal-ad will not respond if they do not consent to the erotic actions expressed within. In this way, every advertisement requests permission to perform an action. At the text-level, however, the POSTER can appeal to the TARGET’s authority when asserting his imaginary sexual interaction thereby negotiating the power of the constructed identities within. Fowler and Kress (1979) note that while commands express inequality, they do not “necessarily imply conflict of interests” (Fowler and Kress 1979: 27); in m4m corpus texts, appeals to authority are made in order to appeal to the interests and comfort of the TARGET’s constructed identity. Concordancing of SUCK with sorting 2L–1L reveals that requests to authority (e.g. let me) are a feature of the m4m corpus, as is shown in example concordances in Figure 4.3.
Linguistic manifestations of this request from the Agent to perform a sexual act (represented by an erotic verb) on the Patient constructs a relationship in which the Patient is empowered: he has power. This is because the Patient is afforded the option of declining the offer for that particular act, and subsequently withholding the Agent’s possible sexual pleasure, as is shown in examples (24)—(26).

(24) i would like to suck your dick and fuck your ass too if it is possible
(25) I like to [sic] my cock to be serviced and will suck urs as well if you wish
(26) Let me blow you and go

There are several means of constructing requests for permission. The most prominent is through conditional clauses introduced by if, as in (24) and (25) above, which express the performance of a sexual activity as conditional on the permission or willingness of the Patient. Another means is the use of the imperative let me, as seen in (26) above. There is a distinction in the way that these structures alter the participants’ constructed identity of power. The use of if-clauses places overt emphasis on the desires of the Patient, while the imperative construction forcefully requests authority and focusses the attention on the desire of the Agent to perform the action. The net outcome is the same, however: the TARGET and Patient experiences empowerment by the deferral for authority. As Table 4.4 illustrates, requests for authority are quite common within the m4m corpus: they occur in 37% of advertisements with erotic verbs in which the POSTER is the Agent.
Appeals to authority are most frequent with the erotic verb FUCK at 95% of instances of the verb. This is almost double the proportion of appeals that occur with the verbs PLAY and BLOW. Requests for authority occur with SUCK in only 21% of the instances of this verb. The considerable difference in proportions can possibly be attributed to the sexual pleasure distribution inherent in sexual practices (see Section 4.1.1): the Agent of FUCK is satisfied by the climax, and since the Patient’s climactic pleasure is never overtly expressed, it is arguable that the Agent must seek permission to perform an action from which he primarily enjoys the pleasure derived from climax. This contrasts with SUCK and BLOW, in which the Agent performs the action for the sake of the pleasure of the Patient. It is clear from the examples above that requests for Patient’s permission to enact an erotic verb constructs the Patient’s identity as powerful, while the POSTER’s identity is constructed as less powerful. This appears to conflict with the finding within the psychological field of research that men use authority to influence sex (Howard et al. 1986), since the male POSTERS’ identities of Craigslist personal-ads for casual sex often appeal to the authority of the TARGET identity.

4.4 Expressions of Desire

It has been shown that in personal-ads where a POSTER seeks a TARGET, terms that represent desire are common (e.g. Davidson 1991; Shalom 1997). The lemmatised frequency list (see Appendix 5) reveals that the expression of desire WANT is a highly frequent verb in the m4m corpus. Concordancing of WANT with default sort indicates that this expression of desire appears primarily in two distinct patterns of usage (see Appendix 9). Firstly, WANT represents the prototypical seek component of personal-ads, as identified by Coupland (1996: 106), that establishes the relationship between the POSTER and the TARGET. This use of the expression of desire is commonly followed by a noun-phrase introduced by the indefinite article a, as is shown in examples (27).

Secondly, WANT specifies the inclination to perform a sexual act and is followed by an infinitive construction (to + verb), as is shown in example (28).

(28) Want to suck a cock right now.

Example concordances of WANT demonstrating the prominence of this usage, both with erotic verbs and with other representations of sexual acts, are shown in Figure 4.4.

There are many expressions within the semantic domain of desire in the m4m corpus (of which WANT is the most salient) and an analysis of these expressions will reveal how expressing desire affects the construction of sexually powerful identities. For reasons of scope, this analysis will focus solely on the use of expressions with sexual acts—the second pattern of usage outlined above—and only expressions with a normalised frequency greater than 1 per 1,000 words will be analysed. Table 4.5 illustrates the most salient expressions of desire identified from the lemmatised frequency list that fall within the scope of this analysis.

Table 4.5: Frequency and proportion of expressions of desire

Expression of an identity’s desire in the context of a sexual act defines the extent to which he—the Experiencer who perceives or feels something (see Section 3.3.1)—is inclined to participate in that action and thus foreshadows the amount of satisfaction that will be experienced in the possible future sexual encounter. In this way, the use of expressions of desire construct an identity for the Experiencer that is sexually pleasured. Extensive psychological research has already demonstrated that pleasure is a key motivator for engaging in sex (e.g. Leigh 1989; Hill & Preston 1996; Meston & Buss 2007); this analysis seeks to further confirm this finding by showing the extent to which POSTERS of Craigslist personal-ads linguistically encode pleasure.

Expressions of desire situate the sexual action on a scale that reflects the extent to which the participant assigned to the roles of Experiencer (of the desire) and Agent (of the sexual act) expresses his pleasure and desire to enact the erotic verb. The expression of desire can also relate to the performance of an action by another participant, in which case the desirous participant is assigned to the roles of Experiencer and Patient. The position on that scale determines the extent to which his identity is constructed as sexually pleasured: the greater the expression of desire, the greater the construction of the expectation of satisfaction from performing the act and hence the construction of an identity with greater sexual pleasure. In the m4m corpus, LIKE and LOVE are commonly expressed conditionally as would like and would love; for the sake of ease of comprehension, conditional forms will be included as part of the lemmatised forms.
The impressionistic interpretation of the degrees of desire and changes to the construction of sexual empowerment can be represented graphically. As Figure 4.5 illustrates, this thesis proposes that keen, WANT and LIKE has less impact on constructing identities of sexual empowerment than PREFER and LOVE, which construct identities that are sexually pleasured to the greatest extent.

Keen, WANT and LIKE suggest the POSTER’s manifest desire and interest in performing a sexual act as Agent, as is shown in examples (29)–(32). The expression of these degrees of desire constructs the Experiencer’s identity as more sexually pleasured than an identity constructed that expressed no desire, since that Experiencer of desire constructs himself as explicitly eager or desiring to engage in a sexual act that he enjoys, from which he would presumably derive pleasure. WANT is the most prominent of the expressions of desire (36% of the total expressions), with LIKE being the second most prominent of these expressions (24%).

(29) I’m keen to suck you off
(30) I just want to suck some cock
(31) i like to face fuck
(32) I would like to suck your dick and fuck your ass

Desire can also be expressed by the Patient of the sexual acts, as shown in example (33).

(33) I want to be undressed, massaged, fondled, licked, sucked,

The expression of desire influences the pleasure that is associated with Agent and Patient roles in sexual acts. Section 4.2 demonstrated that the pleasure from an act is derived principally from ejaculation. The examples above provide evidence that the roles associated with the non-ejaculator (e.g. the Agent of Suck and Blow and the Patient of Fuck) nevertheless express the derivation of pleasure from the performance of an act and are able to construct identities of sexual pleasure.

PREFER expresses an overt desire on the part of the POSTER to be assigned to one particular semantic role in a sexual act. While PREFER does not co-occur explicitly with the erotic verbs, it co-occurs with sexual role labels (see Section 5.4) that implicitly align to semantic roles, as is shown in example (34).

(34) I prefer btm but am happy to go both ways

The role label btm in (34) refers to the receptive role in the sexual act referred to by FUCK and aligns to the semantic role Patient. In this example, the POSTER and Experiencer expresses his desire to be assigned to the Patient role, while stating his willingness to be assigned to the Agent role which he presumably enjoys. In this way, PREFER overtly expresses that the Experiencer predicts greater pleasure from Patient role of FUCK than the traditionally empowering Agent role, and thus creates an identity that is more greatly sexually pleasured than a constructed identity that expresses desire through keen, WANT or LIKE.

Finally, the verb LOVE suggests a great amount of pleasure (OED 2008) and inclination to perform a sexual act, and is similarly used to express inclination towards actions in which the Experience plays both the Agent, as is shown in example (35), and the Patient, as is shown in example (36). Love is an extreme expression of desire that constructs the Experiencer’s identity as more sexually pleasured than is able to be constructed with other expressions of desire. LOVE is the third most prominent expression of desire in the m4m corpus, accounting for 18% of the total instances of these expressions.

(35) [I] would love to suck a hot footy/rugby player through the leg hole of his shorts.
(36) I like to be throat fucked

Expressions of desire have been demonstrated to reflect the POSTER’s inclination towards performing a sexual act as Agent or having a sexual act performed on him as Patient, thereby modifying the extent to which the POSTER’s identity is constructed as sexually pleasured. Concordancing of WANT with sort 1L-1R (see Appendix 10) reveals that the TARGET can also be constructed to express the same range of desires, as is shown in examples (37)—(39).
(37) You either want your cock sucked or you want to fuck a hot btm
(38) It’s up to you when you want to get blown
(39) I like really masc guys who like to fuck ass and get their cock sucked.
(40) You aged 25-40 who is located in and around Sydney/City/CBD with a cut cock that loves to be sucked dry.

In the examples above, the POSTER constructs the identity of the TARGET as sexually pleasured. The TARGET Experiencer can be assigned to either Agent or Patient roles, as can be seen with the two erotic verbs sucked and fuck in example (37). Collocation tests of expressions of desires reveal that erotic verbs (and other sexual practices) significantly co-occur with these expression. As Table 4.6 illustrates, WANT and LOVE collocate with the erotic verbs SUCK, FUCK and PLAY, while LIKE and keen collocate with only one erotic verb and PREFER does not have any erotic verb collocates.

Table 4.6: Erotic verb and sexual act collocates of expressions of desire

Expressions of desire significantly co-occur with erotic verbs. WANT and LOVE co-occur with the greatest number of erotic verbs and other sexual act terms, which reveals that these expressions of desire are prominently used in the m4m corpus to exaggerate the extent of the sexual pleasure derived from the imaginary sexual act. LIKE collocates with FUCK and keen collocates with PLAY, which signifies that these expressions are significantly prevalent in enhancing imagined sexual pleasure derived from the acts represented by these erotic verbs. PREFER does not have any erotic verbal collocates and hence is not used frequently enough in this specific construction to be considered significant. While BLOW is not a collocate of any of the expressions of desire, it is worth noting that 3 of the 5 collocates for other sexual acts (cum, cum, swallow) are expressions of climax and hence have a synonymous function to BLOW.
In sum, the saliency of erotic expressions of desire demonstrates that a large proportion of POSTERS express desire through their constructed identity, and through the constructed identity of their TARGET, to perform the sexual acts represented in Craigslist personal-ads for casual sex. Thus, it could be argued that the constructed identities of participants in online personal-ads for casual sex are characterised by relatively high sexual desire and pleasure. In this way, it gives weight to the findings that a key purpose of pursuing sex is pleasure (e.g. Leigh 1989; Hill & Preston 1996; Meston & Buss 2007), since a considerable proportion of the POSTERS explicitly construct pleasure through language.

4.5 Mutual Agency

The distinction between Agent and Patient is not always realised in erotic verbs. It is possible to construct the performance as a mutual sexual act, such that the each participant is both Agent and Patient. Mutual agency in erotic verbs necessitates that both participants derive an identical amount of pleasure from the action (cf. Section 2.2: Expressions of Climax). There are three strategies for constructing mutual agency: reciprocal pronouns, plural pronouns, and mutual noun-phrases. Reciprocal pronouns assign both the POSTER and TARGET to the semantic role of Agent, as is shown in example (41).

(41) we can suck each other as well

The use of the reciprocal pronoun each other in (41) constructs both participants as equally powerful and having enhanced sexual pleasure in this immediate erotic context: both initiate and perform the same action, and both benefit equally. Reciprocal pronouns do not co-occur with all erotic verbs, however. Erotic verbs FUCK, BLOW and PLAY never co-occur with reciprocal pronouns in the m4m corpus, and therefore have no overt expressions of reciprocity. The construction of plural agency through first-person plural pronouns is another means of expressing mutual agency, as is shown in examples (42)—(43).

(42) Let’s party and play guys
(43) we can have a play

In (42), the use of contracted first-person plural pronoun us in let’s establishes both participants as Agent of the verb play. Similarly, the first-person plural pronoun we in (43) positions both participants as Agent. In this way, plural agency constructs two identities in the Agent role whose sexual pleasure and power are equally matched, since both initiate and perform the action for the same derived pleasure. Plural pronouns are not sufficient conditions of mutual agency, however, as is shown in example (44).

(44)  we can fuck[: I want to be treated as a sex slave

In (44) the participants are constructed as equal Agents through the use of we, as in (43) above; the power balance does not continue throughout the sentence, however, as the POSTER constructs himself as subordinate to the TARGET through the overt expression sex slave, which creates a relationship of unbalanced power. The third strategy for creating mutual agency is through the use of the word mutual, which suggests a similar equality of power through the creation of a sense of reciprocity, as is shown in examples (45)—(47).

(45)  anyone up for mutual sucking
(46)  looking for any guy between 25 and 45 for mutual play
(47)  looking for guys who are around on Saturday for mutual blow or fuck.

The noun-phrase mutual + noun (derived from an erotic verb) functions in an identical way to the reciprocal pronoun in (41) in promoting participants as equally powerful. It is clear from (45)—(47) above that mutuality through the mutual noun-phrase construction is a possible feature of all erotic verbs. Mutual agency is a considerably less prominent construction than unidirectional agency. As Table 4.7 illustrates, mutual agency is particularly uncommon with erotic verbs FUCK, SUCK and BLOW. However, mutuality accounts for almost 18% of the total instances of the verb PLAY, which reflects the euphemistic sense of camaraderie and conviviality.

Table 4.7: Instances of mutual agency in erotic verbs

In sum, mutual agency in erotic verbs constructs identities of POSTER and TARGET as equally ranked in terms of power, through the assignment of both participants to the role of Agent, who brings about an action for which causation is explicit (Lukin et al. 2004). The participants are also constructed as equally sexually pleasured, since both are able to derive the satisfaction associated with the traditional climax role.

4.6 Summary

Chapter 4 has investigated four strategies for constructing powerful identities within the immediate context of sexual acts represented by erotic verbs. POSTERS construct identities for themselves and for their TARGET in Craigslist personal-ads for casual sex that are characterised by more or less sexual pleasure and power depending on the manner in which the erotic action and its co-text are expressed. It has argued that the use of expressions of desire to engage in sexual actions in which the climactic goal is overtly expressed result in the construction of online identities that are significantly more sexually pleasured than identities who do not express an attitude towards sexual acts in which they perform the service.

It has been demonstrated that:

- the sexual act of fellatio, referred to by the erotic verbs SUCK and BLOW, is the most frequently invoked sexual act in the m4m corpus, in which the majority of POSTERS align themselves with the disempowered service-role (Agent);
- explicit reference to climax (e.g. till you cum, to completion) is largely uncommon, but its limited use, particularly in SUCK and BLOW, emphasises the focus on service by POSTERS;
• Agents do not have complete power and often seek permission (e.g. let me, if you want) from the Patient to perform a sexual act, particularly FUCK;
• expressions of desire (e.g. want, like, love) occur significantly prominently in constructing various degrees of the participants’ positive attitudes and inclinations towards performing sexual acts;
• mutual agency of erotic verbs is a significantly infrequent construction.

These patterns suggest that there is a degree of variation in the extent to which POSTER constructs his and his TARGET’s identities as sexually pleasured, and their relationship of power as equal or polarised. There is significant variation in constructing relationships of power on Craigslist personal-ads for male-male casual sex: it is clear, however, that not all POSTERS construct an online sexualised identity which is positioned as more powerful than the TARGET’s constructed identity. Ultimately, most POSTERS appear to construct identities that are characterised by high sexual pleasure. The analyses provides linguistic support for previous research around the motivation of pleasure in engaging in sexual acts (e.g. Leigh 1989; Hill & Preston 1996; Meston & Buss 2007), and questioned the findings around the use of authority by men in sexual interaction (Howard et al. 1986).
Chapter 5: Intimacy in Social Actor Analysis

This chapter examines the means of representing social actors in Craigslist personal-ads for casual sex, and how these representations construct relationships of intimacy between the participants of the sexual act. Intimacy has been extensively recognised as a key motivator in pursuing sex (Leigh 1989; Basson 2000), particularly among women (Buss 2003), and has been described by key terms “emotional closeness”, “bonding” and “affection” (Meston & Buss 2007: 478). In this analysis, intimacy is the emotional closeness or proximity of the social actors in the imaginary erotic actions, as created by the language, such that participants represented as intimate are emotionally proximate. This chapter will provide an analysis of 4 representational processes in personal-ads for casual sex, and will examine how these representations construct varying degrees of intimacy between the two participants. Section 5.1 will describe the exclusion of social actors in passive constructions and identify the scale of backgrounding. Section 5.2 will explore the impersonalisation of social actors, focusing particularly on the representation of somatised participants. Section 5.3 will analyse the standard means of representing participants as indeterminate and the use of adjectives in differentiation. Finally, Section 5.4 will explore the well-established dichotomy of sexual role labels as a process of social actor functionalisation.

5.1 Exclusion

Exclusion is the process whereby a social actor is not explicitly referenced. In the m4m corpus, exclusion is signalled by the absence of a prepositional phrase “by NP” after the erotic verb in the passive voice. In being excluded, a participant’s role in the action is rendered less significant; in the case of exclusion from an erotic act, only one participant is portrayed as being involved in the action while the other is alienated from the action and the other participant. In this way, exclusion constructs relationships characterised by low intimacy. As Table 5.1 illustrates, passive constructions for erotic verbs occur considerably less frequently (13.9% of all instances of erotic verbs) than active constructions (86.1%).
The proportion of erotic verbs that appear in the passive voice is small, and so opportunities for excluded representation are generally quite limited in these personal-ads for casual sex. However, FUCK and SUCK appear in the passive voice more often than average (26% and 16% respectively) which means social actors are more likely to be excluded in the representation of sexual practices denoted by these verbs. As Table 5.2 illustrates, the vast majority of passive erotic constructions represent the social actor who performs the erotic act through exclusion, thereby reducing the significance of his role and identity (van Leeuwen 2008: 29).

Advertisements with BLOW consistently represent the social actor responsible for the action as excluded, while participants responsible for enacting the verbs FUCK and SUCK are represented as excluded in almost 90% of total instances. The social actors in passive constructions are therefore frequently represented as alienated from the erotic act and constructed as insignificant and emotionally distanced from the other participant. Exclusion can be categorised into

There are two instances of PLAY in the passive voice that follow the pattern “to be played with”, in spite of its general status as intransitive in the m4m corpus.
backgrounding, where the excluded actor is present in the text but not involved in the erotic action, and suppression, where the excluded actor is not mentioned anywhere in text.

5.1.1 Backgrounding

Backgrounded social actors are excluded from the main erotic action, but are represented elsewhere in the text, rendering their identities overt yet deemphasised (van Leeuwen 2008: 29). My extension of van Leeuwen’s (2008) theory of backgrounding distinguishes two types of reference to backgrounded actors—explicit and implicit—that differentiates the extent to which participants are backgrounded and, therefore, the extent of their sexualised identities’ insignificance. Explicit backgrounding occurs when the excluded social actor is represented through a lexical item, such as guys, or pronoun, such as you, that refers to that actor. Implicit backgrounding, on the other hand, are those made through imperative constructions in which the social actor is not overtly expressed but whose existence is implied through the verb.

5.1.1.1 Explicit Backgrounding

An explicitly backgrounded participant’s identity and role is separated from the erotic action and is therefore constructed as less important than the other participant’s. Explicit backgrounding can be seen in examples (48)—(49).

(48) just looking to get my dick sucked, maybe rimmed too if youre [sic] keen
(49) i would like to get sucked and fuck you

In (48), it is a reasonable inference to identify the social actor represented by you as the performer of the verb sucked, who, in spite of being excluded (there is no prepositional “by” phrase), is introduced later in the text in the conditional clause if youre keen. A relationship between these two participants is therefore overtly constructed, which is strengthened by the POSTER’s appeal to the TARGET’s authority and inclination with if youre keen (cf. Sections 4.3 and 4.4). The identity of the SUCK-performing social actor in (49) can similarly be inferred from the text that follows the passive erotic verb sucked: the participant represented by you is the recipient of the action FUCK and can be reasonably interpreted as the performer of the verb SUCK, given the semantic relation of the two verbs sucked and fuck in the sentence. In this way, the identity of the backgrounded TARGET is constructed as less important than that of the POSTER, and the intimacy between the two participants is reduced.

The extent to which a social actor is backgrounded is dependent on the grammatical distance between the passive verb and the representation of that social actor. In (49) above, the actor represented by you is within a verb phrase VP that is distinct from, but coordinated to, the VP containing the passive verb. In this way, the actor is close to the main action and is therefore considerably involved with the performance. Compare this to examples (50)—(51) below which demonstrate greater grammatical distance between participants.

(50) hi guys[,] I'm horny as hell, a little drunk[,] i love to such [sic] and wanna get fucked

(51) love to be sucked. I have a dark room in Enmore where we can be discrete.

In (50), the possible actors of the verb fucked are those referenced in the vocative construction hi guys at the beginning. Although the invocation of the actors is separated from the verb by only a handful of words, they are grammatically distant owing to their being in distinct sentences. Similarly, the use of the first-person plural pronoun we in (51) identifies the two participants. In spite of the direct reference, the separation of the pronoun from the erotic verb sucked highlights the insignificance of the TARGET’s identity in the action. The relationship between the social actor and erotic verb in (50)—(51) is contextually inferred rather than grammatically; there is therefore greater emotional distance between the actors than in (49).

5.1.1.2 Implicit Backgrounding

Implicit backgrounding is a more extreme degree of backgrounding that obstructs the identity of the performing social actor to a greater extent than explicit backgrounding. An implicitly backgrounded participant is not represented through a discrete lexical form, but rather is implied through imperative construction or verbs with null-subject. Examples of implicit backgrounding can be seen in examples (52)—(53).

(52) Keen to get my cock sucked in the city today, nice cock waiting to unload, Hit me up let’s bust a load. Free till about 3ish. Prefer close to my age.
Looking for a nice good fuck and suck :)) must be safe. I love to be throat fucked mmmmm

In spite of there being no mention of the performer of the erotic verb get … sucked in (52), the social actor performing that action clearly does exist, just not explicitly in the discourse. Instead, the actor is implied through the imperative constructions hit and let’s. In example (53), the social actor performing the action denoted by the verb FUCK is implied through the phrase must be safe, for which the subject pronoun you is omitted. The omission of an overt reference to the performing actor eliminates almost all possibility of connection—intimate or otherwise—between the social actors, since only one social actor is overtly instantiated lexically, and constructs a relationship that is therefore less intimate than one featuring explicit backgrounding participant representation.

5.1.2 Suppression

Suppressed social actors are excluded from the main erotic action and are not referred to anywhere in the text. It is a more radical form of exclusion than backgrounding and results in the performing actor’s identity being unknown and, subsequently, irrelevant. Suppression is far less frequent in the m4m corpus than backgrounding, occurring once only in the m4m corpus. Suppression of the TARGET’s identity is demonstrated in example (54).

(54)  Looking to play outdoors tonite love to swallow cock drink a load love to be fucked amyl piss drinking and outdoor play.

By making no reference to the other participant in the erotic action, the POSTER renders the TARGET’s identity completely insignificant in their relationship. In this way, suppression constructs relationships of extremely diminished intimacy.

5.2 Personalisation and Impersonalisation

As we have seen in Chapter 4, the erotic verbs FUCK, SUCK, PLAY and BLOW denote sexual actions that may define two social actors. The first actor is the performer of the action, while the second is the one who is performed on, or, as is the case with PLAY, the one who is played with. This second actor is the erotic object of the verb. As Table 5.3 illustrates, SUCC and FUCK are most frequently used transitively with an expressed erotic object, while PLAY and BLOW are more frequently used without. Chapter 4 discussed these patterns in relation to agency and power; this chapter will examine the patterns of representation in relation to intimacy. The erotic object can be represented in two distinct ways in online personal-ads for casual sex: personalised and impersonalised.

5.2.1 Personalisation

Personalisation produces a personalised object, which represents that participant as a human being. It functions primarily to emphasise the potential intimacy between two participants by highlighting their shared humanity, and is linguistically encoded through personal pronouns that represent a human actor, as in examples (55)—(56), or noun phrases denoting people, as in examples (57)—(58).

(55) No talking just suck me for a minute then leave.
(56) I would like to get sucked and fuck you.
(57) looking to venture into m2m by blowing a younger guy
(58) looking to play with dominant black men

Personalisation of the erotic object is a common process in Craigslist advertisements. As Table 5.4 illustrates, the majority (59.3%) of erotic objects are represented as personalised, through either a noun-phrase or a personal pronoun. Erotic objects of the verbs FUCK, PLAY\(^1\) and BLOW are more often than not personalised, and erotic objects of SUCK are personalised 45% of the time. This is in spite of the fact a relatively large proportion of personal-ads with erotic verbs PLAY and BLOW are used without an erotic object that is capable of being personalised (see Table 5.3 above).

Table 5.4: Instances of personalisation of erotic objects

The verbs FUCK and PLAY have a significantly high proportion of instances of personalisation, such that participants of the action of these verbs are represented more often as intimate than with other verbs. (The case of BLOW will be discussed below.) A possible explanation for the frequent use of personalisation with FUCK is that the action denoted by the verb is arguably the most intimate and connected male-male sexual act, often with the two participants being physically closer than any other act, with a greater degree of body contact. Further, there is the possibility for two-way verbal communication between the participants that is not present in the acts denoted by SUCK and BLOW, and so the act offers a unique chance for physical and non-physical connection. In this way, it is perhaps more likely that the erotic object of the verb FUCK would be represented as a whole person with whom the other social actor can adequately connect.

In the case of PLAY, the euphemistic referent is an erotic act that remains undefined (see Section 4.1), which possibly affords the participants the flexibility to explore various erotic acts between them. In this way, the erotic object will likely be a personalised individual rather than a predetermined impersonalised body part that more precisely defines the sexual action which stands as PLAY’s referent. The personalisation of erotic objects of BLOW does not necessarily signify intimacy, unlike FUCK and PLAY which also tend towards personalised participants. Advertisements with the verb BLOW construct personalised erotic objects in all instances, which suggests that the object of this verb is semantically restricted to people (see Section 4.1). Because of this restriction, and in spite of the use of personalisation in all instances, it is difficult to assert that participants of the action denoted by BLOW are more often constructed as intimate than with other verbs due to representations of personalisation.

5.2.2 Impersonalisation

Impersonalisation produces impersonalised objects that represent the social actor as non-human, and occurs, on the whole, less frequently than personalisation in the m4m corpus. As Table 5.5 illustrates, fewer than half (41%) of erotic objects are represented as impersonalised through a body part. Erotic objects of SUCK are more often than not impersonalised, while FUCK, PLAY and BLOW rarely have their erotic objects represented through impersonalisation.

Table 5.5: Instances of impersonalisation of participants of erotic verbs

The process of impersonalisation is realised through somatisation in the m4m corpus data. Somatised nouns refer to a social actor metonymically as a body part, rather than as the person himself, as can be seen in (59)—(60).

(59) looking for a nice cock to suck and fuck

(60) i would like to suck your dick and fuck your ass too

There is a subtle distinction between these two examples in the way that the metonymic relationships between body parts and participants are established. There is no reference to a human possessor in (59), but as it is a necessary condition that one exists—a body part cannot stand on its own and engage in activity without the rest of the body—it is assumed that the body part and the possessor are joined together. This is complete somatisation which seeks to “background the identity and role” (van Leeuwen 2008: 47) of the participant and alienate the possessor from both the action and the other participant, thereby reducing intimacy between the two participants. The representation of the social actor in (59) as a nice cock renders his specific identity insignificant and elevates the modified body-part to greater importance, thereby reducing the possible intimacy of the social actors.

The association between body part and participant can also be made explicit, as in (60), where the body part is linked with the possessor through a possessive pronoun. This is possessivated somatisation which, like complete somatisation, suggests alienation and isolation of the metonymised participant owing to their being represented as an object. In contrast to complete somatisation, however, possessivated somatisation marks an explicit reference to the erotic object which is otherwise de-humanised, thereby constructing an overt emotional connection between the two participants based on shared humanity and decreasing emotional distance. Participant intimacy is maximally reduced in complete somatising representations because of the alienation of the excluded participant and preclusion of inter-actor connection resulting from the lack of overt reference to a human possessor. Possessivated somatisation similarly diminishes inter-actor intimacy owing to the overt reference of a human possessor, but to a lesser extent than complete somatisation; or, as van Leeuw (2008) explains it: “possessivated somatisation still adds a touch of alienation” (van Leeuw 2008: 47).

Collocation tests of the erotic verbs reveal the statistically significant body parts that are employed as somatising representations of social actors in the m4m corpus. As Table 5.6 illustrates, five distinct body parts are collocates of the erotic verbs. Dick and cock constitute the only two somatising collocates for Suck, while Fuck comprises ass, face and dick and Play has somatising collocates ass and bottom. There are no statistically significant somatising collocates of Blow, which is possibly explained by its being used prevalently as a synonym to the intransitive (and therefore objectless) verb ejaculate. From this data, it is clear that somatisation with Suck, Fuck and Play is a statistically significant means of actor representation within the Craigslist advertisements. Such constructions separate participants from their sexual organs and arguably render the interaction considerably more impersonal and less intimate by representing the human possessor as alienated from the sexual experience.
Concordancing of the erotic verbs for patterns of impersonalisation suggests that the possessivation of somatising body part is a salient phenomenon, as shown in example concordances in Figure 5.1.

Complete somatisation is a more common impersonalising representation than possessivated somatisation in the m4m corpus. As Table 5.7 illustrates, complete somatisation accounts for over two-thirds (69%) of the representations of impersonalised social actors. Erotic objects of FUCK and SUCK are represented more commonly as somatising terms that are alienated from their possessor, while erotic objects of PLAY are most often represented through possessivised somatisation.

Table 5.7: Complete and possessivated somatisation of erotic objects

Advertisements that represent a social actor as impersonalised tend to maximise the extent to which alienation and distancing are constructed through complete somatising representation. In advertisements with the verb SUCK, impersonalisation through the expression of complete somatising body parts accounts for almost three times as many representations as possessivated somatisation through possessive pronouns. Thus, the relationship between participants of the sexual action denoted by the verb SUCK in Craigslist advertisements are, more often than not, characterised by representations of alienation and emotional distance, rather than of intimacy.

5.3 Indetermination and Differentiation

As has been demonstrated above, personal pronouns and body parts are salient expressions of social actor representations. Another expression of participant representation are lexical items that generically define an indeterminate identity. The use of indeterminate terms is a constraint of the specific genre: in personal-ads, the TARGET is unknown to the POSTER and so direct and specific address is impossible (Coupland 1996). Indeterminate entities serve as placeholders for participants that may be differentiated in order to elucidate parts of their identity.

5.3.1 Indetermination

Indetermination produces social actors that are represented as anonymised and indefinite individuals, such as with the term guy. Traditionally, indetermination is seen to diminish the importance of the identity of the social actor whose specific traits and features are less significant than the class he belongs to (van Leeuwen 2008: 35). In Craigslist advertisements for casual sex, POSTERS are constrained by lack of information about the identities of their target audience and hence indetermination is a prototypical way of defining an unknown TARGET, as is seen in example (61). In spite of its prominence being a result of the constraints of the genre, indetermination similarly constructs relationships of low intimacy in personal-ads for casual sex.

(61) looking to get my tool sucked at my place now in banks town. can't travel 23, 7 inches, looking for someone who can deep throat it.

There is never total indetermination in the m4m corpus, however. As is seen in example (61), even an indeterminate entity someone undergoes qualification in being required to be able to deep throat it, expressed in a subordinate clause introduced by a relative pronoun. Concordancing of GUY reveals that a salient means of qualification is adjectival modification, as shown in example concordances in Figure 5.2. For reasons of scope this thesis will only analyse differentiation by attributive and predicative adjectival modification.

A frequency list reveals the most common terms of indetermination. As Table 5.8 illustrates, GUY is the most frequently occurring lexical lemma, followed by tokens someone and anyone.

GUY is eight times more commonly used than someone, and thirteen times more common that anyone. The prevalence of GUY can possibly be explained by the informal nature of the text which allows the colloquial term to feature so prominently, and by the identification of all POSTERS and TARGETS as men within men-for-men personal-ads. GUY is therefore the most likely term to be modified adjectivally in order to specify the TARGET’s and the POSTER’s identities, as is discussed in Section 5.3.2 below.

5.3.2 Differentiation

5.3.2.1 Differentiation of the TARGET

The differentiation of an indeterminate entity through adjectival modification reflects the existence of distinct audience roles for this genre of text. Each casual sex advertisement has an audience whose roles can be categorised according to Bell’s (1991) audience-role schema: the TARGET, who is sought by the POSTER, is differentiated from the “auditors who are expected but not targeted” (Bell 1991: 92) by means of differentiation.¹ In being made specific, the TARGET is afforded a greater sense of identity and humanity, and is thus less emotionally distant from the POSTER. Differentiation therefore increases intimacy between participants. The extent of differentiation is proportional to the amount of adjectival qualification that an indeterminate entity receives, and reflects the level of intimacy between the two social actors, as is shown in examples (62)—(63).

(62)  Mature guy wanted to give hot massage

¹ Traditionally, audience roles described the audience of mass-media. It could be argued that the m4m casual encounters section of the Craigslist Sydney site has its own distinct audience categorisation: males who seek casual sex with other males are the target audience and others, such as researchers trawling through the advertisements or men not seeking casual sex with other men, are the auditors.
be disease free, [in] good shape and discreet

In (62), the indeterminate guy is differentiated only once with mature, which demonstrates limited differentiation. In example (63), the indeterminate guy is differentiated as meeting requirements for sexuality str8 [straight], age 17-25yo and, later in the text, the indeterminate entity is further differentiated: disease free, discreet. The POSTER uses both attributive adjectives (str8) and predicative adjectives (disease free, discreet) to define the important parts of the TARGET’s identity. This is extensive differentiation which diminishes a significant amount of the desired TARGET’s indeterminacy. This promotes a relationship of greater intimacy between the TARGET and the POSTER, since the definition of the desired TARGET’s qualities by the POSTER suggests that the two participants are more likely to be closely matched and in turn satisfied.

5.3.2.2 Differentiation of the POSTER

Indetermination and differentiation do not only occur in describing the TARGET, but also features in identifying the POSTER. There are degrees of differentiation, as with the differentiation of the desired target: extensive differentiation, as seen in example (64), reduces the sense of anonymity of the POSTER; and limited differentiation, as seen in example (65), ensures that the identity of the POSTER is safely guarded.

Straight, married, fit, clean, discreet [sic], 33 y/o curious aussie guy.
Im [sic] a bi guy looking for some fun in the local area

In example (64), the POSTER specifies his identity by means of adjectives, just as the TARGET is differentiated in example (63) above. In example (65), the POSTER obscures his identity in spite of revealing his identification as bisexual, which, given the context of the advertisement, is a less significant differentiation. In so doing, the POSTER constructs a relationship defined by anonymity and emotional distance.
Differentiation of the POSTER serves a different purpose to that of differentiation of the TARGET. TARGET differentiation seeks to distil the TARGET from the auditors (see 5.3.2.1 above), thereby increasing intimacy between social actors. POSTER differentiation, on the other hand, seeks to attract the TARGET by means of increasing the worthiness of the POSTER in the eyes of the TARGET (Shalom 1997). Section 2.4 demonstrated that the primary goal of personal advertisements is to sell a product—in this case, a sexual experience—and hence a significant portion of the language is devoted to “constructing the most attractive possible image” (Baker 2005: 136) of the POSTER in order to ensure the greatest number of responses from the target audience. In promoting their attractiveness through self-differentiation, POSTERS create identities that are more human and approachable which creates a greater opportunity for intimacy in their and the TARGETS’ relationships.

5.3.2.3 Differentiating Adjectives

The most salient means of specifying the characteristics that identify indeterminate individuals is through adjectives. A collocation test of GUY reveals the most statistically significant semantic domains of differentiation in the m4m corpus. As Table 5.9 illustrates, differentiation according to appearance, sexuality1 and ethnicity are the most common means of defining the identities of the social actors.

Table 5.9: Significant semantic domains of collocates of GUY

Physical appearance is clearly the most valued specifying attribute within the group of men who seek casual sex with men on Craigslist, with 10 distinct collocates attributed to this semantic domain. This mirrors findings from a study of gay men’s personal advertisements that “body language2 was the most dominant theme” (Bartholome et al. 2000: 309). Among the

1 The domain of “sexuality” is an umbrella term that combines sexual orientation, sexual practices, gender identity and penile specification, as these terms are considered to be mutually concerned with sex and sexuality.

3 The term “body language” refers to language about the body, and not to gestures.
collocates, the most statistically significant terms reference general attractiveness (goodlooking, cute), athleticism (fit, athletic, slim) and muscularity (stocky). This supports findings within the psychological field of research that physical appearance is a key motivator in performing sexual acts (Buss & Schmidt 1993). The use of terms for fitness and muscularity to define attractiveness is the “most obvious way to construct a masculine identity” (Baker 2005: 145) which suggests a preference towards overt masculinity in the constructed POSTER and sought TARGET. The creation of communities of masculinity can result in a sense of shared identity between social actors and hence relationships defined by emotional proximity and heightened intimacy. Further, there is a collocate—represented through two different word forms—within the domain of sexuality, and more specifically gender identity, that seeks to specify the social actors’ conformance to overt stereotypical gender identities: masc(uline). It has been previously shown that negative stereotypes of homosexual men have centred around characterising them in terms of their “‘feminine’ gender performance” (Baker 2014: 106), and this data suggests that there is a preference among men seeking casual sex with men to construct and declare hyper-masculine identities and disassociate from the implied negativity of that effeminacy.

Differentiation through adjectives describing sexuality is another frequent phenomenon, with eight distinct collocates belonging to this domain. Half of the collocates describe sexual orientation (bi, curious, gay, straight) which is perhaps to be expected given the nature of the advertisements: there is differentiation of sexual orientation firstly because the advertisers seek casual sex, and secondly because the advertisements are not limited to men who identify as homosexual. In addition, two collocates—vers and dom—describe sexual role characteristics (for more on sexual role labels, see Section 5.4 on Functionalisation). The last collocate of this domain is hung which specifies an obviously important penile characteristic of having a large penis. This mirrors findings by (Deaux and Hanna 1984) that attributes for sexual interests and characteristics were significantly proportionately higher among male-male ads than male-female personal-ads.

The next most prominent characteristic for differentiation is ethnicity. The most significant collocate that constructs the ethnicity of the social actors is the nationality marker Aussie. The significant use of this adjective with GUY suggests that there is notable worth in being a member of that community, and identification with this characteristic creates a sense of intimacy between (presumably) similar participants. The next most significant collocates—white, followed by Caucasian—which shows a preference for white skin colour in the social actors.
Another collocate is dark which demonstrates the significance of skin colour in advertisements. There is some overlap between the semantic domains of appearance and ethnicity: white and dark suggest ethnic background through appearance, while Caucasian suggests skin colour through ethnicity.

5.4 Functionalisation

Social actors’ performance of erotic acts are normally conveyed linguistically through a verbal phrase that follows the actor and links the action with the actor, as in (66) below.

(66)  masc guys who like to fuck ass

Functionalisation is a means of representing the social actors and their performances or roles as one. The most frequent functionalising terms are pairs that describe the insertive/receptive role in anal sex, which are identified from a frequency list. As Table 5.10 illustrates, the most common functionalising pair is TOP/BOTTOM, which occurs at least twice as often as the other terms, which includes the pairs SUB/DOM and SLAVE/MASTER. Functionalising terms are not nearly as prominent as indeterminate terms, such as GUY (see 5.3.1 above). Given the prominence of sexual practice specification in male-male personal ads (Deaux and Hanna 1984), functionalisation is not unexpected.

Table 5.10: Frequency of functionalising terms for sex roles

Each functionalising term is linked with another to describe a paradigmatic definition of the participants’ roles as either insertive or receptive. The most common pair is BOTTOM and TOP, followed by SUB and DOM, and SLAVE and MASTER. The receptive participant within the pairs
TOP and BOTTOM and SLAVE and MASTER is more frequently invoked than the insertive partner, which can possibly be explained by the prevalence of POSTERS assuming the receptive role (cf. Section 4.2). The naming of the term bottom is assumed to be derived from the body part of the same name that is crucially involved in the sexual act; the derivation of top is assumed to be the prepositional opposite of bottom, reflecting the distinct and exclusive roles of participants carrying these epithets. These functionalising terms are the modern-day equivalent of Ancient Roman sex roles described by Parker (1997). The use of bottom as a description of the fundamental sexual characteristics of the social actors suggests that, following the analysis of somatising impersonalisation (see Section 5.2.2), the receptive participant is partially alienated from the ranks of human interactions through their being invoked by their sexually relevant body part, thereby reducing the sense of intimacy between the two participants and establishing the bottom as a less powerful individual. This power imbalance further increases the emotional distance between the two actors and hence exacerbates their reduced intimacy.

The derivation of DOM and SUB is perhaps more immediately appreciable: domination and subordination. DOM defines a participant who is the insertive partner, while SUB defines a participant who is receptive. DOM and SUB should not be conflated with their related adjectives dominant and submissive, which describe the characteristic nature of a social actor but do not necessarily associate directly with sexual roles. Likewise, the MASTER and SLAVE pair derives from the namesake relationship that defines participants as inherently unequal. In the case of social actors, the MASTER is the insertive partner while the SLAVE is the receptive one. The insertive/receptive pairs are used as the head noun of the noun phrase, which “constitutes a fundamental categorization of self and other” (Marley 2000: 271). Examples of functionalising terms in head noun position are shown in (67)—(69):

(67) I’m a bottom. PLEASE be disease free & clean
(68) I’m a discrete [sic] VGL hairy well hung top
(69) I’m a slim smooth sub with a smooth bubble butt

In the examples (67)—(69), the POSTER identifies himself using the functionalising nouns (bottom, top and sub) that defines him by his performance of a defined sexual role, rather than by an overt human reference. The POSTER is thus alienated from the other potentially humanised participant, and because of this, the two social actors share a relationship of reduced intimacy. The functionalising terms can stand alone in the NP, as in (67), or they can be qualified with attributive adjectives that specify characteristics of the sexual role-player, as in (68) very good-looking hairy well-hung or (69) slim smooth. This has a similar effect to the process of differentiation in which adjectival modification specifies an indeterminate identity in order to maximise the attractiveness of the POSTER to the target audience (see Section 5.3 above). As Table 5.11 illustrates, functionalising terms qualified with adjectives occur only fractionally more frequently than unmodified functionalising terms throughout.

Table 5.11: Frequency of modification of functionalising term

It is not only the POSTER who is able to be defined through functionalisation; the TARGET can be similarly represented, as is seen in examples (70)—(71).

(70) Looking for a slave my age or under
(71) Looking for a dom or master to take me to theirs

In examples (70)—(71), the TARGET is represented solely as a performer of a desired sexual act. By representing the TARGET as a sexual role-player rather than as a humanised entity (such as guy), the POSTER reduces the humanness of the TARGET and, just as with the POSTER functionalisation above, constructs a relationship of diminished intimacy.

Functionalising terms are also used adjectivally to qualify another head noun that stands as the primary identifier for a participant. As Table 5.12 illustrates, adjectival functionalisation modifies indeterminate terms for participant far more frequently than modifying other functionalising terms.

Table 5.12: Frequency of functionalising terms as modifiers

Adjectival functionalising terms account for only 20% of the instances of functionalisation in the m4m corpus, which shows that men seeking casual sex with men on Craigslist more often construct relationships in which men are defined principally by their sexual role rather than by other identifying characteristics. The participants are less emotionally distanced from each other in cases where functionalising terms are used adjectivally than when functionalisation acts to primarily represent the social actors. Examples of attributive functionalisation of indeterminate terms can be seen in examples (72)—(74).

(72) Short dark hr/haz, 5ft 10, fit, bottom guy
(73) Thick hung dom top asian (26)
(74) Need to find a sub dude around my age (32)

By moving the functionalising term out of head noun position, the POSTER defines the intended sexual role of the participant, which is pertinent information given the genre of the text, without defining his identity solely by that role. The use of differentiated bottom guy in (72) and sub dude in (74) positions the participant as humanised while maintaining the definition of his intended sexual role. The use of functionalising terms adjectivally constructs participant identities that are more humanised than a solely-functionalised participant and thus increases the emotional proximity between the POSTER and the TARGET.

Several functionalising terms (BOTTOM, DOM, SUB and SLAVE) modify other functionalising terms in the m4m corpus, as is seen in example (73) above and (75) below.
(75) Sub Bottom looking for GangBang tonite at Syd park

The modification of a functionalising term with another functionalising term promotes the extent of their dominance, as seen in (73), or submission, as seen in (75). A dom top Asian in (73) is defined principally by his ethnicity and then by his sexual role top, which is itself modified by the functionalising term dom which highlights the dominant and high-powered nature of his role as a insertive sexual partner. In this way, the functionalised participants are constructed as more and less powerful, respectively, which results in decreased intimacy owing to the greater power differential.

Since the functionalising terms are clearly grouped into pairs, the definition of one participant by a functionalising noun suggests that the other participant be defined by the corresponding term. Of the 185 advertisements in which the social actors are represented by TOP or BOTTOM, only 30 advertisements invoke both terms of the functionalising pair, which is exemplified in (76)—(77) below.

(76) Any horny slim/athletic bottom available for hot session now with a hung top?

(77) Older bottom looking for top to fuck me

The remaining 155 advertisements have only one participant defined by their role in the sexual act, as is exemplified in (78)—(79) below.

(78) I am a 20 year old bottom with an ass that has never felt what it is like to have a cock fill it. I'm looking for someone to bend me over and break me in

(79) hey guys, vgl relaxed hairy guy here love getting fucked by young tops 16-19.

In examples (78) and (79), only one half of the functionalising pair is overtly expressed, while the other participant is represented as either an indeterminate identity someone in (78) or differentiated entity [very goodlooking] relaxed hairy guy in (79). The sexual act in each of these cases is anal penetrative sex, which is made clear by the overt expression of the synonymous erotic verb fuck, as in (79), or references to the interaction between the penetrative and receptive body parts, as in (78). Since the sexual act is clearly defined, it is clear that the non-functionalised participant is intended to perform the role that opposes that which is expressed in the functionalised participant. In (78), someone is intended to perform the insertive role of a top, which is made clear by the imaginary actions of the indeterminate entity. In (79), the POSTER who represents himself through a differentiated indeterminate identity positions himself to perform the receptive role of bottom, which can be identified through the use of the passive fucked. The invocation of the term tops for the TARGET confirms the intended role of the POSTER. It is therefore clear that it is not necessary for both parts of a functionalising pair to be overtly expressed in order to position both participants in their respective roles.

5.5 Summary

Chapter 5 has investigated four of the means through which social actors are represented in imaginary erotic actions, demonstrating that different strategies construct relationships of intimacy to varying degrees. POSTERS construct their relationship with the TARGETS as more or less intimate depending on the manner in which the TARGETS are represented. Included, personalised and differentiated actors are the representational means that construct the most intimate participant relationships, whereas excluded, impersonalised and functionalised actors construct the least intimate participant relationships.

It has been demonstrated that:

- when passives are used, one of the social actors tends to be excluded;
- backgrounding participants is more frequent than completely suppressing them;
- the majority of erotic objects is personalized, rather than impersonalized, with somatization (e.g. ass, bottom) a key device for impersonalisation;
- the genre of the Craigslist ads means social actors are constructed as indeterminate (e.g. GUY, someone, anyone) and are differentiated via adjectives specifying appearance, sexuality and ethnicity;
- the most frequent functionalising nouns refer to sexual roles (e.g. top and bottom), yet are less frequent than the non-functionalising GUY.

These patterns suggest that there is a degree of variation in the extent to which POSTER constructs a relationship of intimacy between diverse performed sexualised identities. However, the majority of POSTERS appears to construct intimate relationships through personalising and differentiating. The analyses also confirmed previous research that language about the body and about sexuality are important devices in the construction of sexualised identities in male-male personal-ads (e.g. Deaux and Hanna 1984; Bartholome et al. 2000).
Chapter 6: Conclusions, Implications and Future Directions

This thesis has explored the linguistic mechanisms for negotiating power, pleasure and intimacy within and between identities in online personal-ads for casual sex in an attempt to broaden the understanding of the linguistic construction of sexualised identities.

6.1 Summary of Findings

Sexual acts are motivated primarily by power, pleasure and intimacy (Leigh 1989; Hill & Preston 1996; Meston & Buss 2007) and can be analysed according to these motivators. POSTERS of men-for-men Craigslist personal-ads for casual sex construct virtual sexualised identities for themselves and for their TARGETS that interact in imaginary sexual acts to form a relationship. This relationship can be characterised by the constructed sexual pleasure of each participant, the constructed hierarchy of power between participants, and the level of inter-participant intimacy.

6.1.1 Power

Psychological research has identified the desire to feel powerful as a primary motivator for pursuing sex (Hill & Preston 1996). Chapter 4 examined the construction of a hierarchy of power—control over the course of a sexual interaction—and argued that it is determined largely by agency. Section 4.1 demonstrated that a POSTER who imagines a sexual act, represented through an erotic verb, constructs an identity in which he assigns himself to one of two semantic roles: Agent or Patient. Assignment to the Agent position proposes that the POSTER’s online identity maintains control of the erotic action and therefore is able to ensure that his needs are prioritised and met. POSTERS more often than not construct online sexualised identities that perform the imaginary sexual acts and are therefore positioned as more powerful than the TARGET’s constructed identity.

There are two strategies through which power, as constructed by agency, is negotiated in the m4m corpus: appeals to authority and mutual agency. Authoritative power is negotiated through a POSTER’s appeals to the TARGET’s authority or permission to perform an imaginary sexual act, as examined in Section 4.3. Research demonstrated that authority is a key means of influencing sexual interactions (Howard et al. 1986). Appeals to authority diminish the power of the POSTER in allowing his Agency to be denied by the TARGET. More often than not, POSTERS construct online sexualised identities that do not hold supreme control, but rather cede a portion of the control to the TARGETS’ constructed identity by ensuring that their interests are prioritised. This appears to contradict the findings made by Howard et al. (1986) about the use of authority among men.

The second strategy for negotiating power is the construction of mutual verbal agency. Mutual agency assigns both participants to the role of Agent, such that their sexual pleasure through climax is ensured, and their power is equally ranked. Mutual agency of erotic verbs is a significantly infrequent construction, and is constructed in several ways, as has been demonstrated in Section 4.5. Mutual agency occurs in less than 5% of instances of the erotic verbs FUCK, SUCK and BLOW, but is considerably more prevalent with the erotic verb PLAY. Mutual agency occurs in 15 expressions of PLAY, accounting for 18% of the total instances, which reflects the euphemistic sense of community action.

These patterns reveal that there is a degree of variation in the extent to which POSTER constructs his and his TARGET’s relationship of power as equal or polarised. There is significant variation in constructing relationships of power on Craigslist personal-ads for male-male casual sex: it is clear, however, that not all POSTERS construct an online sexualised identity which is positioned as more powerful than the TARGET’s constructed identity, although most do.

6.1.2 Pleasure

Mutual agency has been shown to modify the construction of not only powerful identities, but also of pleasured identities. Previous research has demonstrated that pleasure is derived from sex (Leigh 1989; Hill & Preston 1996), and is one of the most important, and most obvious, motivators for the performance of sexual acts (Meston & Buss 2007: 477). In contrast to power, sexual pleasure—the possible satisfaction and enjoyment derived from a sexual act—does not exist hierarchically; rather, it is uniquely defined for each identity. Sexual pleasure is implicitly encoded in the semantics of the erotic verbs, as has been argued in Section 4.3. The assignment of Agent and Patient semantic roles determines the distribution of sexual pleasure, such that SUCK and BLOW implicitly convey pleasure to the Patient while FUCK conveys pleasure to the Agent; the pleasure for the opposing roles in each verb is never overtly expressed and hence these participants’ identities are constructed as having undefined pleasure. Psychological researchers have found that men are primarily motivated by physical release (e.g. Carroll, Volk & Hyde 1985; Leigh 1989), while Meston & Buss (2007) have found that men prominently endorse items relating to orgasm in particular as motivators for pursuing sex (Meston & Buss 2007: 500). Overt expressions of climax as the goal (e.g. till you cum, to completion) of the erotic verbs focusses the attention of the erotic action on the final goal, thereby constructing the Beneficiary’s identity as more sexually pleasured. Craigslist m4m POSTERS tend to promote the sexual pleasure of their TARGET’s constructed identity over their own, positioning themselves in a role of service, which aligns with findings that in addition to power, pleasure and intimacy, partner-pleasing is a key motivator for sex (Leigh 1989).

Sexual pleasure is similarly modified through the expression of sexual desire, as has been demonstrated in Section 4.2. Expressions of desire reflect an attitude or inclination to perform an imaginary sexual act, and so the Experiencer of this desire is constructed as more sexually pleasured. Desire expressions are situated on a scale, such that they enhance the construction of sexual pleasure to varying positive extents: keen, want and like increases constructed pleasure to a minimal extent, and love increased constructed pleasure to a significantly greater extent. It could be argued that the constructed identities of participants in online personal-ads for casual sex are characterised by relatively high sexual desire and pleasure. Further, this suggest that POSTERS construct identities with explicitly positive attitudes towards (casual) sexual acts.

It is evident that there is a degree of variation in the extent to which POSTER constructs his and his TARGET’s identities as sexually pleasured. Ultimately, most POSTERS appear to construct identities that are both characterised by high sexual pleasure. In this way, the analyses provides linguistic confirmation for previous research about the significance of pleasure in pursuing sexual interaction (e.g. Leigh 1989; Hill & Preston 1996; Meston & Buss 2007).

6.1.3 Intimacy

This thesis also examined the construction of relationships of intimate identities in personal-ads for casual sex. Intimacy has been recognised as a key motivator in pursuing sex (Leigh 1989; Basson 2000), and is necessarily defined by the interaction of two: in the case of personal-ads for casual sex, POSTERS’ ads can construct different degrees of intimacy between their own and their TARGET’s identities. Chapter 5 has demonstrated that there are several linguistic means of representing the identities of POSTER and TARGET which influences the inter-actor intimacy.

Passive constructions are largely uncommon within the m4m corpus, but performing actors within passive constructions are most often excluded from the main action of the erotic verb, as has been outlined in Section 4.1. It has been demonstrated that backgrounding participants is far more frequent than completely suppressing them. In this way, the majority of participants of erotic verbal actions that are expressed in the passive voice are constructed as emotionally distanced but not entirely alienated and, therefore, form a constructed relationship defined by low, rather than a complete lack of, intimacy.

Intimacy is strongest when both participants are human; if a participant is represented through just one part of his whole person, then the potential for an intimate relationship is diminished. The majority of social actors in the immediate context of erotic acts are personalised, and represented as humans, rather than impersonalised. Impersonalisation through complete somatising body parts (e.g. ass, cock) is a prominent means of representing a social actor as less humanised. Possessivated somatisation (e.g. my ass, your cock) is a less frequent representation than completely somatised social actors. Therefore, social actors are most often constructed as belonging to intimate relationships between full participants.

The genre of online personal-ads for casual sex restricts the capacity of the POSTER to identify his TARGET who is very often represented as an indeterminate identity (e.g. guy, someone). The specification of the generic TARGET through adjectival terms defines the identity of the TARGET by restricting the quality of certain characteristics that belong to the semantic domains of appearance, sexuality and ethnicity, as has been demonstrated in Section 5.3. The prominence of adjectives from these domains mirror findings that appearance and sexual practice specifications are significantly common among male-male personal-ads (Bartholome et al. 2004; Deaux and Hanna 1984). The act of specifying the identity of the TARGET functions as a means of distilling the perfect imagined TARGET from the pool of auditors. In contrast, specification of the POSTER constructs an identity that has diminished anonymity and therefore forms part of an intimate relationship.

Finally, functionalisation defines the POSTER and TARGET by the sexual role that their constructed identities perform in the imaginary sexual acts. Functionalisation is less frequent than the non-functionalising yet indeterminate guy. The most common terms for functionalising are sexual role labels (e.g. top and bottom). POSTERS who construct identities represented through functionalisation often differentiate the functionalised actor by means of adjectival terms in order to augment the emphasis on the humanity of the actor’s identity and thereby increase intimacy.

There is a clear degree of variation in the extent to which POSTER constructs a relationship of intimacy between diverse performed sexualised identities. However, the majority of POSTERS appears to construct intimate relationships through personalising and differentiating, thereby providing linguistic confirmation for previous research about the significance of intimacy in engaging in sexual interactions (e.g. Leigh 1989; Basson 2000).

6.2 Contribution to the Field and Implications

This thesis addressed three significant gaps in the current body of linguistic knowledge: the genre of online personal-ads for casual sex as a space for identity construction, the linguistic construction of sexualised identities, and the application of corpus linguistic methods to sociolinguistic research on identity construction.

The well-established field of personal-ad research has historically focussed on the GOAL of romantic partnership (e.g. Coupland 1996; Shalom 1997; Bartholome et al. 2000; Baker 2003, 2008, 2014), originally in personal-ads in print-based newspaper classifieds (e.g. Jones 2000; Marley 2000) and, more recently, in online personal-ads (e.g. Bakar 2012; Baker 2014). This thesis abandons the traditional GOAL of romantic relationships in analysing online personal-ads for casual sexual relationships. In particular, the shift towards personal-ads centred around casual sex has strengthened the findings made in previous research about the importance of language about the body (e.g. Bartholome et al. 2008), sexuality (e.g. Deaux and Hanna 1984) and feminine masculinities (e.g. Baker 2003) in the construction of identities in male-male personal-ads. This particularly has broader implications for the sociological, psychological and medical perspectives of male body image, which has been significantly researched in the last decade (e.g. Lee et al. 2002; Morgan & Arcelus 2009), particularly for gay men’s body image (Feldmen & Meyer 2007; Schwartz 2009). Further, this study’s findings on feminine masculinities has implications for the wider feminist movement; particularly, the pervasive association of femininity with negativity, especially within masculine identities (Killianski 2003; Sánchez & Vilain 2012).

Previous research on sexualised identities has analysed the performance of masculine and feminine identities within sexual contexts (e.g. Baker 2008; Abe 2004), focussing specifically on stereotypically hyper-masculine and hyper-feminine performances of individuals. Instead, this thesis focusses on the construction or performance of powerful, pleasured and intimate identities in sexual context. Results show that there is considerable diversity in not only the manner of realising these performance dimensions, but also in the resulting performances.

Finally, the application of corpus linguistic methods to sociolinguistic research is an emerging field (Baker 2010: 1). In the limited research that has been undertaken, corpus linguistics research has focussed primarily on the construction of gendered identities (e.g. Caldas-Coulthard and Moon 2010; Baker 2003; Bakar 2012). In applying corpus linguistic methods to the analysis of the construction of relationships of powerful and intimate sexualised identities, this thesis contributes to and extends the emerging field of corpus-based sociolinguistic research. This has important implications in strengthening the legitimacy of combining these two fields of linguistics, which will result in further sociolinguistic research using corpus linguistic methods.

6.3 Limitations and Future Directions

While this thesis makes several key contributions to our understanding of the relationship between language and power and of the linguistic construction of identity, there are several limitations to this study in its scope, data and analysis.

The data was limited to the men-for-men section of the Craigslist website and so the only constructed identities represented were those of men who seek sex with men. This study is therefore limited in its ability to generalise its results across the domain of all men, and further of all gender-identifying groups. Secondly, the lack of access to reliable and consistent metadata for the age and location of the poster means that this thesis is restricted to generalising the results to all men-for-men posters using the Craigslist casual encounters section. The availability of reliable and consistent meta-data for age, location and class for all personal-ads would allow the findings to be expressed as functions of these variables and provide a greater insight into the way age and location influence identity construction, and the way that class relates to the construction of power (cf. Fowler and Kress 1979; Wodak 2009). Thirdly, this thesis uses only one corpus—the m4m corpus—without comparison to a reference corpus. In this way, it is impossible to suggest whether the means of, and trends within, identity construction are specific to the men-for-men casual encounters users of Craigslist. An extension of this research which includes a reference corpus composed of personal-ads for casual sex from one or more of the other organisational categories on Craigslist, such as m4w (men-for-women), or w4w (women-for-women), would verify the extent of the specificity of the findings to the m4m group. Lastly, the data of this thesis was collected from only one source website—Craigslist—and so the results of this study pertain only to the individuals who use that website. Research that includes data from a wider range of sources, in particularly from mobile services, such as Grindr, would be more extensively representative of the construction of sexualised identities.

In terms of analytical frameworks and methods, this thesis is limited in what constructions and representations could be analysed. Firstly, only some of the tools in van Leeuwen’s sociosemantic inventory for analysing identity representation were used, limiting the variety of unique representational devices for constructing identities of intimacy. In terms of semantic analysis, only 4 linguistic strategies were analysed and it is likely that an analysis of further strategies would provide greater insight into the means of establishing power relations through language. In particular, expressions from the domain of hospitality and service (e.g. hosting, driving) are particularly salient in the m4m corpus and these would enrich the analysis of the construction of power hierarchies.

Finally, there is a significant amount of personal-ads for casual sex on Craigslist that contain visual data in addition to linguistic data. In a genre where physical characterisation is prominent (Bartholome et al. 2000), it could be profitable to conduct an investigation that incorporates analyses for visual and verbal identity representations (cf. Bakar 2012), particularly with visual data that strongly focusses on genital representation. In particular, an examination of the interaction of these two modes of identity construction and performance—whether these two modes act as reflections and extensions of each other—could significantly contribute to an understanding of the interplay of these two modes as a means of identity construction.

The intention behind the linguistic construction of powerful, pleasured and intimate identities cannot be deduced from the texts alone. This thesis has analysed the “meaning potential”
(Halliday 1978: 39) in POSTERS’ personal-ads; it demonstrates the “how” of sexualised identity construction, but not the “why”. Future research (e.g. in the form of interviews and focus groups) would need to be undertaken in order to understand to what extent POSTERS consciously choose particular constructions, and their intention behind those choices, or to understand the effect of such constructions (e.g. how TARGETS react; or whether or not the desired casual sexual interaction takes place, and if it corresponds to the way it has been constructed in the personal-ad).

Although this study does not exhaustively examine the diverse means of constructing virtual sexualised identities, it does demonstrate that there are degrees to which POSTERS linguistically construct relationships of power, pleasure and intimacy in imaginary sexual acts. In particular, this thesis shows that the majority of POSTERS construct identities both for themselves and for their TARGETS that are characterised by high sexual desire and intimacy with each other. Further, this thesis has significantly contributed to the growing bodies of research that attempt to study the genre of personal-ads, the linguistic construction of sexualised identities, and the application of corpus linguistic methods to sociolinguistic research.

Hi there...
Older guy here with a bear build who is genuinely seeking a younger guy into both older and bigger guys for relationship / or friendship (FWB)
Keen to hear back from single (preferably gay) guys 18 up to about 30 (prefer local on north side of Sydney) that would be interested in coming over and seeing where it goes from there. Looking to meet sooner than later ...not in a week time...as it wont happen guys.
Be good to meet with other like minded guys after the same things as me. I am genuine to meet with a view to ongoing friends with benefits or longer term friends ? Open to anything. I am romantic, loving caring and generous guy and also keen to pursue something more with a guy than just sex. Looking to be able to care about someone again. !
I am a guy who loves being with younger people. I like to spend time out with guys camping, going on drives and weekends away. Movies and diner are also on the agenda.
Can host most nights and some days or travel to meet or just go for a drive !
Know there are guys out there into daddies and bears...etc so love to hear from you !!
Thanks

Hi, 30 aussie dude here, never been to a sauna and keen to have a look. Im looking for a guy who might be interested in taking me, and maybe we could have some fun also, maybe a drink or two first, then head in.
Im in OK shape, pretty slim and good looking. Hoping to find a guy around my age, thought not essential. Nice, sorted and sane, no pressure please. ONLY safe and clean. If you are interested, let me know! Thanks,

4375446238.txt
Looking to chill with another laid-back, down-to-earth awesome guy. Either stroke together, stroke eachother, and hopefully leads to oral. Bi/Straight/Gay/TS porn playing while we have some fun.
You must host locally.
Also looking for my first facial. So, oral would be awesome.
Me: awesome, bi-wm, 6foot, 160lbs, 7.5cut, DDFREE, Clean!!!, chill, awesome, non-scene, not into pigs or overly hairy guys. I'm not in any scene and am very discreet, so if you're curious, I would probably be a great start :)
SEND PICS OR NO REPLY
You don't have to send a face photo. But definitely cock and/or body. This is CL afterall, so I respect people who don't want to send a random stranger their face photo before even confirming if this is legit.
REPLY SOON so we can do this :)

Laid back guy looking for a bi or curious mate to come over and watch some porn. Into wanking, wanking each other, and sucking only. Open to something regular if we click. Got my own place, prefer to host, and got lots of different porn. Even have a fleshjack we can share. Very discrete and d/d here - you should be too. Under 35 only and in reasonable shape. Replies with pic and stats will get my attention.

4375614603.txt
Need older 45+ hung thick teacher for long oral sessions

Ideally looking for older guy (over 45 strictly) ideally with own place, porn vids & spare time to perform long oral on my 6.5-7 and have the favour returned. Have recently become curious about returning the favour and sucking my first cock.
Definitely looking for older guys who are 7.5" and over, preference is 8" or more, and thick please. Please understand that my fantasy is for a man who is more well hung than myself, so please do not be offended if I don't reply to you if you email me and you don't fulfill this preference. I won't consider anyone who doesn't fit this preference, sorry.

I imagine a scenario where it's dark with the only light coming from the TV playing porn and slowly licking and sucking your cock with you helping me learn, perhaps 69'ing instead and just exploring slowly...

cant host, but willing to meet outdoors if you don't have a place, and willing to travel a reasonable distance for the right person

Please make sure you have a CLEAR COCK pic to email me if replying to this ad.

Please also include your details, age, cock size etc and what you are interested in (hopefully, you've read the ad properly and it's the same as what I'm looking for).

No one word or one line emails with no details thanks

Dont waste my time, and I will not waste yours.

Looking for someone that can host only, not into public stuff.
Keen for a blowjob from a guy or chick. Happy to jerk off/eat out in return.

Straight 25yo caucasian, average/cuddly body. 7.5 inch cock.

Happy to swap pics.

4375729278.txt
I've always fantasied about exploring a guys body while he's passed out. Here's what I'm looking for: you come over drunk and or take some sleeping pills (stilnox is good). You pass out on my bed or lounge. I'll slowly take your clothes off and explore your body. Touching licking sucking. All limits will be respected. Prefer if you're str8 or bi, and must be in reasonable shape under 35.

Genuine replies with description of yourself only!

4375735657.txt
fit smooth clean Asian 172cm 63kg 7" uncut, looking for a massage, just finished work and want to de-stress. I will return the favour. I have massage oil.

You don't have to be an expert, I'm not an expert either, but it feels nice to have someone touch my back and head. It makes me happy.

You must be able to host. I prefer fit/slim/musc White male under 30 year old, please send a body pic. No fake pics or old thanks.

4375736456.txt
Must travel, I'm curious str8, must be discrete as have a misses. Looking for under 30, tradie, chill, clean, discrete, who need a reward

4375739227.txt
just a curious straight guy looking for someone to meet up with for regular jack off sessions, probably at the Randwick tafe, jacking each other off under the stall. Not interested in seeing your face, or anything more than jacking off (for the time being at least).

my age or younger would be preferable but not that important, and race/size doesn't bother me.

let me know.

4375744845.txt
discreet non scene man wanting to meet up in ur hotel - be discreet clean fit here, European like to get naked - masculine contact etc

4375745072.txt
Hey Boys
I am here for You and i WANT your pleasure.i am young bottom and very horny i am slim and smooth do you want me? $$

Kisss

4375747307.txt
I want a decent, clean guy with reasonable body to come to my hotel room. Have a quick shower, jump under the sheets, and go with the passion, enjoying the feeling of bliss (or enjoying it, whatever the term you prefer) until we feel the awaited release! It may be a one time meeting so why not go with the flow, give in to the feeling, be wild (in a good way), and make the most of the moment! :)

It's cool if you've had a few drinks.

After this, we go our separate ways and back to our normal lives.

Straight or curious guys welcome! Let me know what you want, I will respect your limits.

Simple. Straight to the point. Great satisfaction!

Can host this time only!

34 or less only please. Be clean and discreet.
looking for passionate sex with lots of kissing with a White young male 18-30 years old. if you are blonde, even better.

I can't host, I can drive up to 15 mins from glenfield. Send a photo thanks.

Will rim ur ass deep and hard until u cum...only rim clean smooth asses 18-30...feel my tongue up yr ass n cum at the same time. Could blow if u want. Got a place or travel

hey guys im strictly bottom, im lat20ino, a little chubby, get told im very good looking can host from now to late late 2night love to suck cock swallow, been fucked once a bout 2 years ago and really want to get fucked again pretty opened minded to alot of things so tell me what you wanna do as i said strictly bottom not looking to get my dick sucked or fuck u i cant travel. and please dont reply with a one liner. give me some bloody info a pic or something people who reply with things like "interested ?" will not get a reply

I want to suck cock today/tonight.

I love getting a facial. So if you, and your mates if you like, need to unload get in touch.

Me: 35, chubby, awesome cocksucker, clean, non-smoker, drug and disease free.

You: under 45, not Asian or Indian, big load, clean, non-smoker, drug and disease free.

Can't host and can only travel a short distance. Outdoors is always fun ;)

A fantasy of mine is having a decent straight, bi or curious guy who's had a few drinks or is drunk come to my hotel room, and experimenting or letting me suck him off. Doesn't matter if he has a partner or not. If he passes out, it's cool, he can spend the night here and go home in the morning after a good rest.

I can host, and doing this tonight only.

Must be 32 or below, discreet, clean, reasonable body. The younger, the better.

If this ad is up, I'm still looking! Message me quick!

anyone in the Shire that can host or knows somewhere outside and wants their cock sucked.

Nothing wanted in return.

First preference goes to replies with pics and dominating/face fucking requests.

New to the hills area , where are best beats guys ?

Any info would be great !!!

If your gl, disease free, in shape and after a bj get in touch. Pls no Asian it's just not my thing, without sounding rude.

I am a good looking Aussie dude that can host. Fit and disease free. Like to play the bottom if that comes into it.

Send me your stats and a pic

Yo! Bottom guy with no plans for tonight, feeling frisky and hoping somebody is available and dtf :) have a lil bit of body hair and some small tats.

Okay, before anybody emails me, there are a few prerequisites before emailing me. If you don't meet all of these, don't email me; I just won't respond.
1) You must host. I live with my rents and WILL NOT FUCK IN PUBLIC. "But what about my van with no windows?" No? That's not sketchy.

2) Must have pics. I'm not arranging to meet someone without seeing their face. No exceptions.

3) Must live on the Northern Beaches. It's raining and I don't drive so local only. Penrith isn't local and neither is Marrickville.

Otherwise message away! Look forward to your hard cock throbbing in my tight little ass! xx

4375763651.txt
love to suck and be on my knees and enjoy a nice dick in my mouth, I love the taste and the feel of a dick inside my mouth and because I like it so much I enjoy sucking it, which means you will love it being sucked. I also am into being fucked. I am into just blowing you and you go or if you want to fuck me then that's on the cards too. I also like dom guys as I am also into being a submissive boi in the moment being your slut at your need, I have a few fetishes also and could be open to stuff that you desire with in reason or mine if u are keen and which is all about your pleasure anyway, if your keen then email me and we can go from there, you must be able to send a face pic and stuff cause I wont just meet any one , im a good looking clean aussie str acting and easy going bloke, im 35 but look younger and have a bit of a boi look I guess, ok bod good legs and blue eyes brown hair, Not sexually into Asian guys and pref guys under  35 but could be open to a couple of years over love younger guys also I am discreet as well

4375764476.txt
Hey guys, I am a mid 40s married guy, very keen to try giving oral to the right guy.

I am not into deep throating/gagging or anything forced.

What I would like is kissing, fondling and licking and sucking to completion, nothing heavier.

My fantasy is a stockier hairy bear type, unshaven, bald and with a mustache would be extra hot but not essential. Drug and disease free, drink is cool. I'd come to you, you'd come for me. I want to experience making a man come in my mouth.

As I said I am mid 40's, hairy, slim build but big belly.

I need someone discreet (obviously), and if you know the reference even better.

Hi guys. I'm looking for some CNNN play tonight. I love being naked and exposed for the pleasure of other guys. I want guys to (force) strip me, take my gear off, explore my body (everywhere), with hands and/or mouth, and jack and/or suck me off. Explore my body - arse, balls, cock. I am open to role play scenarios. I'm athletic/muscular, caucasian, 167cm, 60kg. Inner suburbs. NB: I'm not looking for 'sex' - I'm looking for tactile/voyeuristic guys who want to touch, feel and explore. Cheers.

Horny guy in a Surry Hills looking for fun now, or anytime today. I just love sucking & riming and if you want to fuck even better! I am 48, easy going, and bi and play with gay bi and first timers! Just be genuine!

Just tell me what your cock is like, your age and and want you want to do if we hook up?

Simple. I can host, and can hook up most days and some nights. Replies with an email address or mob number will make hooking up quicker. Also a photo or 2 would be great!

Suck you soon....

Hey guys, I'm looking for casual meet ups in inner sydney.
I have average looks, chubby 110kg, hairy, caucasian, brown hair, blue eyes, 6.5uc.
I particularly like sensual, tactile and intimate fun and am versatile-bottom when it comes to fucking, but that is not essential when I play.

Looking for fun with nice friendly guys into big bearish types. I also like hairy guys, average to chunky is a turn on for me as well. Married, bi and curious guys are most welcome to come and experiment with me.

Get back if keen with more then a sentence, to at least indicate u have read this posting, with some stats and wat u like to get up to.

Cheers

Hey been out with the guys and heading home. I'm very horny with nothing to do. Had a hard day playing sport would love someone to rub it better. Str8 muscley athletic guy here.

I need a clean cock to suck. Free now and can host. Must be disease free and no drugs.

19yo btm boy living in inner west with average and hairy body, love sucking cock, getting mine sucked, getting rimmed and get fucked cant host or travel, so that means you have to pick me up and we can go anywhere ;)
reply with PICS

19 yo bi sub bttm looking for any fun now can play in your car outdoors or you can host me up to you im hot and want you deep in my throat and ass

25 year old Aussie guy looking for some fun late Sunday morning / early afternoon. I'm up for just about anything, but do tend to lean towards being a top, I've bottomed a few times but definitely prefer being a top.
I can't host, so you must be able to. In your response send me location, stats and pics. Responses with pics get first priority.

Looking for someone who is older around 35 to show me the ropes. Looking to be a bottom person to you being top. If you can pick me up the better the go. Send a full body pic with clock and seperate torso to get a reply. You must be 35 plus. I am 19 years old and looking for older.

hey guys im 21 young male wanting to get high and have some fun ;)
im a top but i also love sucking dick to ;)
i also have a virgin ass you can try change :D

Just home after a few beers pissed and wanting a hot time anyone else up for it ?

Give me a good reward and get off!!!
The Best Way to Start the Day

Young Aussie guy, 23 avg build and 5'8, still awake and was wondering if anyone's awake and around the cross/eastern suburbs area and looking to get their cock sucked and balls licked or just fool around in general.

Looking for NSA fun here. I'm not into anything weird.
I'm inexperinced so It'll be better if you more experienced.
I'm prefer straight acting guy. Big plus if you're hairy and of bigger build than me.
Let's have fun soon.

hi guys im horny as hell, a little drunk i love to suck and wanna get fucked let me know what you wanna do im 20 latino abit chubby but not full on fat, ad get told im good looking im not fem at all
I'm a young Asian boy looking for hot discrete action with older men. I am still a virgin and is inexperienced with sexual experiences, please violate me.

Hey horny str8 boy looking for bj. In Surry Hills. Send deets and let's do this. Will not reciprocate.

I'm looking for a STR8/bi/bi-curious guy who enjoys a wonderful massage, muscle worship and loves to be sucked for hours and hours! :) I am clean, educated, drug-free, working professional who enjoys these sort of casual encounters. I have taken a course in sensual massage and have been told I'm a very good sucker :) this can be a one time thing or a couple of times (if we click) or maybe even a regular thing (if we really click)... you can smoke, watch porn (str8 or gay) while I service you... you will be serviced/worship from head to toe.. I am into tall guys.. at least 5.10.. preferably 6 feet and over.. and prefer muscle/buff guys. I've done this a couple of times and guys have really enjoyed it. I can travel or host. A clean, safe apartment in a quiet neighbourhood in Caringbah.

Please reply with some pictures of yourself and we'll take it from there. We don't have to "get to know" each other, if you don't want. It can be as anonymous as you want.

Early risers! Drunk guys! Straight or curious! Release some load in a hot mouth now, before the day starts! Treat yourself to that much needed release! Now!

I can host now this morning at St Peters! Be clean, &lt;34, reasonable body and serious about meeting and blowing!

If you're drunk and need to crash, you can crash here on the spare bed.

Blow and go! Simple!

Hi guys wired, 37 years old anything goes very clean and discreet, looking to cop it cum play your fantasy on me, I'm bi like tranny and women too.

Any guys want to be my first step? I'm here now watching loads of porn and I want to try a few things make that I need to be so horny so any guys want to start with coming and playing with my dick. I'm 23 also if that helps.

I've learned Swedish massage.

I am gay but love to service str8 guys.

I use oils and various lotions/products. I stay clothed. You have the option of being naked or in your undies/towel.

If you want, I can also end the massage with a blowjob or a handjob. ;)

You must be str8, bi or bi-curious and have a muscle body.

Total discretion assured.

I am bi top and dominate 32 yo

Looking for a teacher who can ease me into taking cock

Please no one over 40

I want to hook up with a voyeur, someone who wants to watch me strip and tell me to start playing with myself. Have me on display anyway you like.

For your eyes only – me partially naked or in the nude. You can take pictures as you wish.

Suggestions that suit you most welcome.

SORRY, but I can't host.

4376645027.txt
hi guys,

just coming down off a weekend filled with party supplies, im all out but still have the drive.

looking for a friendly couple to play with.

Me:

30 bottom
5'6
5.5" cut
99% preference to GWMs
99% preference to cut guys size is not an issue but thickness is a must (for at least 1 of you)
I am wanting to try out DP as this is a massive fantasy of mine.
Women: I'd love to lick you out while your partner is doing me doggy style. I am also keen for penetration but would prefer to just please you with my tongue.

Also role play can be hot, I love the idea of me coming over saying hi ect ect once were cool to play I would go to the bedroom/lounge and sleep (or pretend to sleep) the two of you would then begin playing near me and eventually try to penetrate me on any end without waking me up.
I love the thought of waking up to your manhood at full mast and mid penetration!

travelling can be an issue for me unless you are close to a train station. Alternatively I can be picked up and dropped off afterwards.

I have pics on request, please send your pics on first message.

FYI im not really a submissive type, i know what i want and i know what i like and i know how to get it ;)!

Speak soon.

topcraver

31 yr old looking for a top for some bb action... Can host. Genuine only please... No time wasters!
Hey guys!

So essentially im looking for a first time experience with another guy. Have been curious about it for ages now, and I would really like to act on those urges. Id be interested in mucking around, kissing, sucking, wanking and fucking with a care free and easy going guy between the ages of 20-30. Eager to top, and im trying to get interested in bottoming, maybe we can chat about it to help me get in the mood for it? The pictures ive put in are some of the positions I would like to try, either as a top or a bottom.

About myself; im 22, 6'4" tall and 75kgs slim. Have a cut cock. And I don't mind if your cut or uncut, just as long as your clean. I might be able to host some days, but it would be much better if you could host. If your interested please message me, however if you want to message please include a face/torso picture of yourself, just so I know who im talking to. Cheers guys looking forward to hearing from you!

I'm kinky and looking for like minded company .I live in Bligh park and can host and even happy to pick you up if you live local and are what I'm looking for .even fwb would be good as well .prefer younger then me

Sexually I'm very kinky and open minded but haven't gone all the way yet with a guy .willing to try if it gets that far .vers.
During the week it sometime in the afternoons or night time .
I'm 34 m 6ft 3 82kg .looking for younger then me .under 20 gets first preference
Must ddf  as I am

Hi Guys. I'm a good looking guy, fit and discrete looking to meet fit muscular Rugby League players. If you are in the closet, that's fine. I'm in my early 40's and have a big cock. Lets hook up for some hot horny fun and keep it between us. No fat or old guys please.

I want my ass spanked hard and you can spank my balls lightly. I like to be handled roughly, push me around the room. Can't host.

mature bi male..bottom.. looking to hook up with tops at sydney airport on 27 march between 11-14 hrs

4377048119.txt
I'm younger than eighteen but still obviously legal (if that's a problem, turn back now); Iv'e never been fucked before and I think i'm ready. I'd prefer someone younger (18-40), good looking, athletic get back to me if you're looking for some fun!

4377048831.txt
The idea is simple, and a real fantasy of mine.
I make a new mate through craigslist, a straight mate.

We swap some emails, chat online, maybe even chat on the phone, then we can meet for beers, or hang out, catch up after work or when time allows.

Talk about our week, whatever - a general friendship.

As far as anyone knows, we're just 2 mates catching up for a beer. But then straight after, we head to a hotel, or my apartment, or your office, etc.

So once we step into the building, close the door.. You've got your own personal cock sucker. Use my mouth like a pussy. I will deepthroat and swallow, and can suck for hours.

My ultimate fantasy is to find a straight/bi guy who will roleplay and treat me like one of his naughty slut girls.
Tell me to 'get on your knees slut' and grab the back of my head 'lick my balls, that's it baby' etc
Move me into positions that suit you, and pump my mouth as slow or fast, soft or hard as you like.
I would also love love LOVE to find a guy who would tease and grab my nipples, and even lean in and suck them like he does his girls tits.

Get back to me if you're even the tiny bit curious to learn more.

The cut off is around 40, but if you are young looking and in shape, or with a huge cock, feel free to send a pic my way.

We work out the terms of our arrangement, but best of all it is completely string free, discreet, just a bit of fun.

4377049116.txt
Hey guys, I have a nice place close to Kings Cross and it's a filthy afternoon. If any young straight guys, want a few free beers in exchange for a massage just get back to me as soon as possible.

Would suit any young guys who want a drink or are stuck out in the rain traveling.

please reply with contact details...your description.....a pic is always good and any questions you might have.

One line replies will be ignored but all others will be replied to.

Please put WET in subject jeader to prove you are not spam.

Cheers GUys

I'm tall, athletic built, half Aussie half nz, brown hair, green eyes. I'm curious and want to try m2m but not with gay blokes. Looking for white, preferably Aussie but other is ok, straight blokes who like women and similar to the situation I'm in. I like straight blokes who want to have some fun, a beer and be mates. If that's you get in contact with me. And we can Skype or exchange pics. I'm gl and you won't be dissapointed. Your pics first.

horny asian mouth seeks big thick white cock to suck. I am seeking white man aged 30-40.. loves fit/muscular man! please be straight or bi... loves a guy to cum all over me or my face!

pics with number for fast response..

am discreet.. no one has to know i sucked you off... Married men are welcome looking for hung straight, bi or gay guys that need their load swallowed discreetly. Looking to want to wait on my knees, blindfolded ready to suck and swallow, all NSA!!!

Looking for a bit of fun role play. Not something I do often or really at all for that matter but I'm def interested to give it a try. Ideally you would be looking to play a dad teacher role wanting to be pleased by your son.

I'm happy to arrange a mutual time and prefer to do it at my place I'm happy to host. keen for this afternoon tonight

Please email me with pics, stats of yourself and what you like and would like to do.

I'm 27 slim 180cm tall dark hair blue eyes caucasian 76kg and good looking. I have pics to share in emails.

Please be clean and disease free I am and expect the same.

Hi dad, how can I make you feel good?

Looking for a fantasy I want to fulfill. I want to be stripped, worshipped and teased by a group of older men or older couple. It's a clothed male/naked male fantasy. I want to be undressed, massaged, fondled, licked, sucked, etc, by clothed men for their voyeuristic pleasure. By older I mean 55 and over or thereabouts - and I have NO upper age limit. I'm 38yo, athletic and very well toned. I'm Caucasian, 167cm, 60kg, and look younger than my age (but not too young). Being exhibited and tasted for the pleasure of a couple of group turns me on. Not sex - exhibition and voyeurism. Some kind of role play scenario is cool - strip poker where I lose every round - or something like that. I'm flexible with days and nights. Cheers!
Hey gay guy from dee why looking to suck off straight, curious or married men. Cant travel but am home alone so can host discreetly. I rim, deepthroat and will bottom for the right dude. Please be under 35 so message if keen x

Nice looking fit tanned 50, 74kg, ddf looking to meet during the day for casual fun, lunch, few drinks or whatever. Easygoing and friendly and looking for same. Could be regular and can be generous. Can host or travel. Get back to me with mobile if interested. Happy to meet beforehand if you want.

Bi curious type looking for similar - light play, potentially more.

Seven inch u/c - in six foot, in good shape Aussie.

Can host - safe play only

Looking for tops to come over and play in my bed and ultimately I want to try to bottom. First clean guy to send pic and stats gets my hole.

If you are into Asian ass, hit us up

Looking for a reward?

If you are hung and uncut get in touch. Be height/weight proportionate and under 35. Full stats and a pic for a rapid response. Hosting on the north side.

Any dads around?

Looking for dirty minded dads to talk to anyone into fone?

hit me up

Hi. I have a fantasy for a grandpa (age about 70 or the older the better) to come to my house and play with my cock. I'm also up for a finger prostate massage at the same time and a maybe suck me if yr keen. (See how it goes but I might wanna try sucking your cock too). I'm just out of the shower, have a shaved cock and balls and I'm squeaky clean. I'm late forties slim Aussie and I can host all afternoon and all night. If we plan a hook up, I'll leave my front door open and I'll be lying on my sofa wearing just shorts. You can just come in, slowly pull down my shorts and play with my lubed cock, balls and hole for as long as you like. Really horny now so send me yr stats and a pic and lets do this!

Hey,

i've always wanted to be rimmed but the girls i'm into have never been into that idea. Its always been a fantasy of mine to have someone lick out my arsehole, i just want to feel what's it like.

i'm 23 asian (born in australian) and fit.

as i'm straight i'm not interested in anything more i just want to this to be fullfilled but willing to be nude while you do it and you can be too if you want. if there's any other suggestions on how it could be better for you let me know but i will not be touching cock and certainly not putting my cock anywhere. i can't host but willing to travel. would like to be in the south west area liverpool, fairfield, campbelltown, parramatta, bankstown etc.

not into old guys i think its just kind of creepy...

4377143002.txt
Visiting for tonight only. Regular guy here wants to suck cock tonight. Will it be yours? I'm non local so no one will find out. You host or in my car. Expert here. I know what I'm doing. Just lay back and relax.

Hi men,

Fit and athletic 24yo here, feeling extra horny on this great day.

Stand 178cms and have a 6.5" cock, and a nice tight body and ass to match.

INEXPERIENCED - but extremely genuine. Looking for someone to teach me a few things: how to suck IF you are 100% clean and very hygienic.

How to take it: IF you're willing to warm me up first. Open to toys.

If nothing else I've got a great set of balls full of cum and we can have a play with some porn.

Sorry can't host but CAN and will travel within reason.

Only seeking older, get back ASAP!!

27 fit good looking asian here looking for someone clean and discreet (uncut is a plus)

Looking for a guy around the area who has car can pick me up take me to a quiet spot drop my pants and show me the way a cock should be sucked, I'm 30 year Irish guy with nice 7.5" smooth cock. Must be discrete as bi and have girlfriend

Looking for someone to give a sensual massage.
I will be naked and you will come in and rub me all over.

Can't host but want to meet now.

Please include a pic if you want a response.

Looking for a toned, athletic guy around 18-24 who has a smooth to smoothish ass who wants to get rimmed in secret. I can be clothed or nude, (you be nude) and I'll rim your clean hole for hours. I can pick you up, host or travel to you. No anal. Just a long rimming session on your beautiful ass. Can become regular if you like it. Must be ddf and a non-smoker. Still looking if ad is up.

Im a good looking, tall, toned, tanned atheltic australain man with a smooth 7" uncut cock. I'm horny and wathing str8 hardcore porn, looking for a dirty older man to come to my hotel room to suck, rim, finger and eat my cum or take it all over their face.

Dirty talkers welcome too.

Relatively fit Asian. Had a long week so looking to get some relief tonight.

Haven't done much with other guys but looking to try something new.

Can host.

Be under 30. Prefer white bottoms. Send pics and stats

In city driving around with a stiffy. Leaving soon to head out west. Anyone want a lift and a HJ or BJ. Would be good if you got a lift with me instead of a cab or train. Sit back, relax and feel my hand rubbing your balls and shaft on your way home. How good is that. Be clean, discrete, d&d free.

Hey I'm a 18 year old bottom looking for some fun tomorrow morning. I can not host but can travel but has to be close to my area so blacktown, Quakers hill, rooty hill etc. I'm full Aussie tall muscular and have a great mouth, I will give u the best blowjob of your life guaranteed, I only like older man and please please no time wasters I'm sick of them serious people email me ASAP

Some basics :)
- I'm 18 years old, 175cm (5'9"), short/medium brown hair and grey eyes, 62kg.
- I'm a virgin, and consider myself bi-curious.
- I'm looking to experiment in things like sissification, forced feminization, hypnosis/brainwash, BDSM, anal, etc.
- However I'm straight-acting/looking and have real life commitments, so this has to be discreet.
- I've never done anything like this on craigslist before so I'm VERY cautious and will want to talk/cam on skype first.
- I can't host but can travel by train.

My overall fantasy is to go to a dominant man's house and have him force me to watch sissy slave hypnosis/training videos with headphones on. I want to be dressed up to look like a sissy little bitch, degraded, name-called, humiliated, tied up, and fucked hard + deep throated. I want to be turned into a submissive sissy whore and forced to obey. My master (or daddy, if that's what He would prefer me to call him) can order me to make videos and send them to him, to skype cam for him, to cam online for others while I'm not with him. Maybe even down the line I can be shared with masters friends like a worthless whore.

I'm also willing to just be fucked/trained in usual guy/guy scenario if that's what you prefer, and for this to be a one-time, short-term or long-term thing.

But as much as all of this excites me, it also scares me, and I will want to take things very slowly at first. Before meeting I would want to first start with emails/skype.

For this to work we'll also need slutty clothes, make-up, dildos/bondage equipment, headphones, a TV (preferably large) connected to a computer with lots of hypnosis videos. I can help pay for some of this but getting it is a problem for me.

If you're interested, please reply with a body/face pic and the subject line "Hey Bitch", and tell me about yourself and the things you'd like to do with me.

Thanks. :)

Hi guys,
I will be at the University of Technology tomorrow (UTS) for class and wanted to ask whether anyone is keen for some NSA oral fun? There are many places I know of that we could go so let me know if you're keen. I do prefer older guys, and guys who can last longer than 5 minutes, but not fussed with cock size.
I am Asian, bicurious, height and weight proportionate, 5'5uc.
Some pics, like face and cock, are welcomed! I look forward to hearing from you guys.

At 49, I am str8, happily married, fucked been sucked by both sexes. Love great massages by guys which normally ends with me being sucked and a couple of times fucking the masseur. It's time for a change. I want the massage but I want to be aroused for me which may lead to you fucking me. Rest assured that has never happened and I know for a first you can't be thick. Length is fine. So let me pay you at yours for a great 1-2 hour session of massage followed by some attention for me. I am 6', 105kgs, blue eyes, blond/grey hair, 7.25" cut thick.

26. Curious aussie. Place free this week and want to massage and worship some tradie feet.
Come by on your way home and get em done. I'm hoping some tradies out there have masseurs as well as id be keen an anything to try foot worship after you've been wearing them. Genuine but must be very discreet as have gf.

Hey dudes, if you want your balls licked and cock sucked until you blow email me a cock big and lets meet up. I'm 25 skinny guy and hungry for cock. You must drive to me!

Hey everyone...thanks for reading my ad
I will be in Sydney on Friday 21st of March
I am a straight married man with streaks of curiosity
I have never been with a man but was hoping to try what the title says
Yeah, yeah sounds very gay...sorry...but I am very comfortable with who I am...
I thought about it last week when I went for a swim in a local pool
I am fit, body proportionate, reasonably looking mixed Asian man
I will be staying overnight in this hotel close to the Sydney Airport so I can host
You be my age or younger, fit, drug and disease free
Seeking someone straight with curiosity streak, same description more or less...
Get back to me if you are interested...
I will ask for a face pic so if you are not cool with that, do not reply...I will not save any of it cause my wife checks on my stuff all the time
Now that I am traveling alone, I thought I’d give it a shot
Hope to hear from you....

Want to deep throat a nice cock tonight.

Can't host.

If your interested message me your stats and cock photo. Big dicks get priority.

Looking for some fun today! Up for most things. Message me what you want even if it's me just giving you a blow job. Can't host but can meet at a park or pick you up in my car.

Feeling like giving some blow jobs today. Message me if you want to release a load. Hung cocks a plus.

Don't mind if it's in a discreet public place like bush tracks or public toilets. You name a place.

Cock photos get priority.

Heading home from work next hour and hoping to stop off in Chatswood on the way for some hand relief.

Nicely hung, clean, D&D free, looking to sit back while you use your hands on me.

Genuine.
Straight, married, fit, clean, discrete, 33 y/o curious aussie guy.

Looking for daytime hookups but can also make between 5 and 6:30 Monday evenings.
Prefer local hookups and looking for You to HOST.

As mentioned, I’m clean and discrete so you should be too. I'm Hung with 8.5 inches, thick and cut.

Cheers

4378595805.txt
Married 40 year old masculine guy who works in the city weekdays. I'm Aussie Caucasian and in decent shape. My regular 8" cut cock I've been sucking for 4 and a half years has moved to the UK :-(

You aged 25-40 who is located in and around Sydney/City/CBD with a cut cock that loves to be sucked dry. You loved to be sucked slow and deep and explode into a willing mouth, say once or twice a week. Maybe than twice sometimes. I'm told I'm an awesome cocksucker too.

Idea is I drop around after work, get my cock and cum then I fuck off home. I actually don't live in the city myself and this arrangement is easier without the sneaking around with the missus. Me giving the bj is all. Nothing else! The missus certainly isn't part of the transaction either.

Essentially after one regular cock instead of sucking half of Sydney. Though respect might be a trial and error process to find that.
4378604129.txt
looking for a massage.
prefer white, slim/fit, 18-30 years old. send a body pic. I'm looking for a massage and will return the favour. thanks a lot.

I'm seeking a male or CD sub to come to my CBD apartment either as a once-off or recurring theme to submit to their master as a kitten. You'll be required to move about only on all fours and communicate in meows. You'll be stripped down but collared, a tail plug will be inserted into your arse and depending on whether or not you're a neutered kitten you'll be placed in chastity.

You'll be trained to be a good kitten, being punished if not performing as required. Will involve oral and anal sex, BDSM and more. Limits respected.

If you have certain gear already, please provide pictures. I will purchase additional equipment necessary. Please also provide a picture of the pet in question as well as your pet name.

4379570350.txt
Hi Craiglist,

I'm a 25 male and love the idea of trying anal. I've never done it before and so I would need you to be gentle. I'm attached to a girl and so it would need to be very discreet.

I'm a normal guy - fit, sane, d/d free (you must be too) etc.

I'm free until 2pm today and can host.

I must stress this will be a one off - I am curious to try this however don't see anything else happening.

I guess I'm looking for someone who can be gentle and help me realise my fantasy. No preference to age or status, as I mentioned, I'm looking for someone who can help me live my fantasy.

If this is you please get in touch.

4379602303.txt

Fit, grey haired guy here looking to venture into m2m by blowing a younger guy.
Ideally you will be aged over 25, slim and preferably smooth with limited experience (someone wanting to try like me) and would be happy to have a massage and a head job.
You will probably be a non smoker, doesn’t matter whether you are cut or uncut - but you need to blow a big load into an accommodating mouth. No need to reciprocate unless you want to.
You must want total discretion.
If you are interested in moving forward you will need to be available this afternoon or tonight.
Looking forward to giving you the best bj ever!!!!!!

Hi im an 18 year old asian boy who is looking for a older man to have an ongoing sexual relationship with. I am very submissive. I have an extreme fantasies to fuck anywhere in public. Also is still a virgin, so you get to deflower me.
35 year old stocky, hairy guy with a bit of a tummy looking for a masculine, good looking 26-34 year old who wants to get nude and frottage at your place. I'm not into anal. Tell me if you're new to m2m and nervous. You must be ddf and a non-smoker. Be genuine. I can travel now. I'd like to frot for a few hours. If you're younger and can host, say hi too.

Hey boys - visiting sydney and looking to release. 27 fit bro looking for similar to have some discreet fun - can you host? See pic and reply with pic and stats.

Am looking for some clean fun with bi/straight guys tonight, the biggest cock and pictures get preference no time wasters.

Hosting only.

Serious leather Master looking for equally serious sub boys/couples/female sub sluts.

Into all aspects of BDSM leaning more towards lifestyle approach than purely 'role playing'. Tastes range from light to more extreme. Used to easing in nervous beginners as I am dealing with pigs more used to hard abuse.

If you don't have pics to send including one of your face then I will not be interested.

Looking to arrange inspections and if interested to be arranged sooner not later. I'm not here for you to wank over whilst exchanging messages you have no intention on following through on. Serious applicants only and if that is you approach with the appropriate level of respect.

Howdy Guys

Bi Straight acting dude that is looking for some NSA fun. I am Aussie and fit.

175cm tall and 72kg

If you want to know more just let me know, more than happy to swap pics and take it from there. Happy to travel

4380225701.txt
Anyone got a foot fetish? Get in touch and talk to me. Tell me why you like them.

438022316.txt
I am a dom seeking a sub to submit to me in my Central Park apartment for a whole weekend, with the first available opportunity being the 28th March - 30th March. During the time you are in my apartment you will be required to accept all that is given to you, and your limits which will be discussed beforehand will be respected. I am seeking someone who is able to totally obey the commands given to them as a worthless fucktoy and will be trained as necessary to perform.

Once you take your first step into the apartment you will be stripped, collared and plugged. I will run through basic procedures and training for you as part of your serving of me through the weekend. You will be fed when required, and you will eat off the floor. You will sleep at the foot of my bed, chained. When you need to use the bathroom you will request permission and the door will remain open.

You will be tasked with various chores to complete around the house. They may involve cleaning, laundry, exercise and more. You will submit to training, including but not exclusive to:

- Oral sex
- The use of ball gags, or open ball gags
- Rimming
- Nipple clamps
- Collars
- Anal sex
- Ass to mouth
- Butt plugs
- Blindfolds
- Hand/foot cuffs
- Orgasm denial
- Bondage
- Whips, flogs

Time permitting, you will be dressed and taken to public places where you will still be required to submit. You may be asked to leave the apartment with collar and butt plug in, or other similar arrangements. If you do not do as you are told, you will be punished accordingly until you do as required. If you orgasm without permission, you will also be punished.
I may invite friends around or seek guests from CL who you will serve as necessary. I expect after such a session you will sleep with the remaining cum drying on your skin.

Photos and video will be taken, but your face will never be included (unless blindfolded/hooded). For this weekend, you must submit in your entirety. You will have no sense of self and will be referred to only as slave. You will be used and abused as a sex slave.

If this sounds like you, get in touch. Age or fitness does not matter, just be drug and disease free. Please provide pictures, your limits and other areas of interest that we may explore.

Sir

Very simple, send a few details about yourself, if all good pop over and I blow you. Prefer I stay clothed. Drop by, drop your pants sit back and relax. Shoot your load into my swallowing mouth then go. Simple. If you enjoy, do it again some time. Don't make a habit of it but around tonight and would like a regular supply of hot fresh cum from one good person. Especially love younger heavy spunkers, the inexperienced and uncut but happy to consider all. Be clean, sane and ddf, as am I!

4380328528.txt
I know this might not be the best place to look for genuine individuals judging by some of the postings here, but I'll give it a shot......

My flatmate is potentially moving out in a month and kinda hoping that I'd be able to find a (first and foremost) decent flatmate who doesn't mind the occasional wank together over some straight porn or even picking up chicks to tag team together.

About the flat / room:
It's at Randwick, Eastern Suburb. It's extremely convenient location, across the street from the shops, gym, etc. The room is medium size, all furnished.
Share the flat with me and another guy (who wouldn't know what we're up to, so I need someone who can remain discreet. I don't mind him knowing us tag teaming so much, but I'd wanna keep the wanking part discreet).
Rent is $230 / week including bills. 3 weeks bond.
Got wireless internet and washing machine.

A bit about myself... I'm 27, 6'4", 91 kg, in a decent shape.
I train 3x a week (mostly strength training, I'm a wannabe powerlifter), so a training partner would also be great.
Got mixed interests: Love fitness (powerlifting, nutrition, supplements science, psychology, etc.). Love music, going to gigs, movies and talking shit or serious over a beer or two or five with the right person. Also got just the right dose of geekiness.
I'm Asian, grew up here. Even lived in the outback for a bit.
I'd say I'm straight / bi-curious, I do enjoy sex in the company of other guys (not to have sex with guys, but just in their company, e.g. tag teaming, sex in the same room, etc.).

The other flatmate is an American guy, also my age. He works professional job full time and does part time study. He's an easy going, mind your own business kinda guy.

The kinda person I'd be looking for:
- Not a creepy guy, decent easy-going bloke
- Age: 23 - 35
- Sorted financially (i.e. stable income)
- Straight / bi-curious.
- Neat / clean, house-trained.
- Someone who also trains. Would be good to have a training partner.

Please fuck off if you're just gonna message me being all creepy.
No, I'm not interested in sex offers.

Send me a message with your details (pics would be nice, just wanna know if you seem like a decent guy. Not interested in pics of your dick).
Hit me up boys.

(Please email me directly to bros.maister at gmail dot com. Emails from craigslist address often end up in spam folder or disappear completely. I've particularly had troubles with yahoo emails. I reply to almost all emails).

4380392367.txt
Blow my nose to mars and you can have me to use as you wish. I have been with 2 guys before and done everything. I have a tight as ass. Just use me as you wish. no scat or piss but anything else pretty much. I'm big and muscular with a strong mind but ill go low for the blow baby.... I host near drummoyne

I enter your hotel room, you order me to take keep my mouth shut and to strip my clothes off and you laugh at my body, you can barely see my small inadequate cock. You tell me I am a pathetic cunt hole and that your going to ram your cock down my throat.

You tell me to lay on your hotel bed with my back on the bed, you roughly sit on my face and force me to use my tongue on your balls and anal passage almost smothering me, you then make me finger my ass and play with my pathetic cock, you bend my head over the side and force your manmeat hard into my mouth getting harder , telling me im a useless cunthole. You laugh as my erection reaches 5 inches and im now gagging on your cock asking you to slow down and to be gentle as spit and dribble comes out of my mouth, you ignore my pleading and laugh as I try to use my hand to stop your length reaching the back of my throa

Send me a good description of yourself, when u r available, and pic/s if possible.

4381189224.txt
Married bi guy is after that rare find: a younger fit guy who has his own place.

I'd like a casual but maybe regular relationship where I can arrange to meet up for various things, such as coffee, a drink, watching sport, a meal .... leading onto sex maybe. However I am active only.

This sound like something you'd like to explore? A body pic at least in your reply will get things going.

4381193433.txt
Make a booking and tell me to strip and let me to do your house work or servant duties.

Exhibitionist will do your cleaning, being stripped naked....

I can work for you for washing, cleaning, ironing, gardening, sorting out, more errands etc.

Relax and watch as you give the orders as you make sure it's done to your satisfaction.

I am easy going, very discreet, fit and sexy, 6 tall 76Kg, euro, very clean and uncut.

Any age and nationality welcome and nice rewards too....

Any issue can be discussed, so contact me if you have any question. Looking for a REGULAR POSITION work.

Regards for all.
do NOT contact me with unsolicited services or offers

4381319715.txt
Hi there ;),

I just arrived a week ago in Sydney. As i mentioned in the title I'm a straight guy never had something with a men before but I'm interested in it and i would like to change that.

I would like that you suck my dick and fuck me in my ass :) . Even it is my first time i would prefer a big cock... I do only safe sex and you must be good looking and of course diseases free! Maybe i would like to suck your dick and fuck your ass too if it is possible. You should be between 18-30 years old and able to host. Your apartment or whatever should be also clean and nice.

I hope i will find somebody who will help me to lose my "ass virginity" :D. I'm really exited if you also exited and interested send me a pic of your body, face, dick your location and dick size!

I will answer every request but only if you send me a pic of your body, face, dick your location and dick size!

Kind regards

The straight guy

Hi all,

19yo fella with Friday off, looking to get dirty with a guy or guys ( would be better ) some good ol' piss shit fun is something I've always wanted from a group of guys, but one will be great. Stop on by and walk straight through the front door to the bathroom and see me lying in the tub naked , use me and abuse me then leave and I await the next. Kik me so we can discuss what you'd love to do, or just reply with a body pic, face no required. I'm pretty hairy btw, heh

Kik me and we can discuss ;) ( AusAwesome ) guys under 20 would be most preferred but anyone will be great to have, older can be really hot hehe, maybe I can even suck you off in some bushes near by and have you walk me home on my hands and knees ;)

see you guys soon.

25 bi guy in town for a few days. Looking to have some fun while I'm here.
mutual sucking, fucking, j/o etc.
slim, 6.5" smooth.
Looking for someone who might be a yoga instructor, or semi experienced in yoga, that wants to strip off and do nude yoga together. Could be a regular thing if we click.

I'm a good looking aussie guy, slim/athletic build, brown hair, 6.5" uncut cock and a bit of an exhibitionist :) I've done one on one nude yoga before and I loved it. I know there is a Naked Yoga class in Newtown that is fairly cheap and I really want to go, but I want to go with someone else that I know and have met beforehand.

Preferably you can host, as I only have a small 1 bedroom apartment on the North Shore. It could work but it would be squeezy.

Please send your stats and a pic in your reply and let me know how experienced you are at yoga.

I am looking for a fun on this friday night . I am 5ft3" with a tight hole needs to be loosen ;)
I'm a young clean, good looking tall guy. I've had sex with men before though I consider myself to be bisexual and I lean more towards being a bottom, I'm curious about exploring my sexuality and was hoping that a top would show me the ropes into being the best top I could possibly be. I'm located in the eastern suburbs, I cannot host but I can travel. I'm also interested in TG/TV relations. If you're free tonight and would like to get together please let me know. No email ping pong, your picture will get mine. Write "Bottom" in the subject so I know you're not spam.

is the best place for outdoor sex in sydney and never anyone there. spread the word. 7km bush trail to drive through with numerous toilet blocks and bushland

4383444229.txt
I am a photographer who is available to take your profile pics or portrait at a very reasonable cost. I can take Fully dressed, partial or full nudity, from dormant to erect, and cum shots if you wish.
Can also take pics of you dressed in your favorite TV or Bondage outfit.
Can host in Marrickville, or come to your place for your comfort. Pics can be taken on your own sd card, or transferred to your flashdrive, or I can provide a flashdrive for a small extra charge.
Photoshoots generally go for about an hour, and you receive 40-60 High Definition pictures. Payment by cash or paypal on the day of the shoot.

4383444697.txt
So I have this fantasy about being with two guys or more at once (c'mon lets be honest who doesn't). So you and your partner, friend, random or whatever just let me get in on the group action so I can play with multiple cocks at once. Your pic gets mine. Free all this weekend.

4383444904.txt
This is how I see this weekend going. I come over to yours, undress and climb into your spa. You bring me a drink and we have a few. Pretty soon my hand wanders to your cock and I start stroking it. You play with my ass for a while before you decide to fuck me. Let's get this happening this weekend! Reply with a pic. No limit on age. Big cocks to the front of the line!

4383445203.txt
I'm looking for a guy in a relationship who wants some fun on the side. I can't host but if you can I want to be shown an assortment of your partners bras and panties which I will wear while I suck your cock and be your bitch. Your pic gets mine.

Time wasters move away!!

Hey guys...

so got a day off uni tomorrow and looking to meet up with a older dom guy for a quick rough session ;)
pretty inexperienced but always had a fantasy to be forced to get on my knees, get ur cock out and get my head pushed down till I gag over and over then get bent over and rammed hard up my tight clean ass with spanking and verbal stuff then pull out and cum all over my hot face and in my mouth you won't be disappointed ;)

sound like something you like?? wanna be forced hard by a dom guy on my day off maybe host, defn can travel hit me back with your ideas, stats, and pics happy to send mine after can't wait to hear what you guys have in store for me

hey lets meet tonight for some light play like touch, jo together etc maybe suck
im 19, slim athletic, tallish, white, and new to this can drive
ddf and discreet

lets skype and meet up ;)

Who are seriously keen to humiliate a guy naked in public?

Answer with "public humiliation" to know that your are real your stats and pics and what you will do of me. If I like the scenario I will do it without any no.

Time waster or email ping ping or pics collectors go AWAY!

This ad is serious.

Anyone interested to get rim tonight, love a hot ass and a nice cock, can travel if not too far, if you are horny, let me know i'm at crown hotel for a friends birthday, and am super horny, my friend showed me this back route area in bella vista, which was like all farm.
