Dubrovnik Maritime Museum sits on a site that acts as a thoroughfare between Dubrovnik and the next city, inviting visitors to explore the city’s rich naval heritage. Exhibits date back since the 14th century, ranging from ship replicas and artefacts to charts and rare books. Located beside one of the many wall fortifications built around the city, the museum also serves as a lookout towards the heart of the city. Constructed and clad almost entirely in timber, its materiality references that of Dubrovnik’s merchant ships.
