This is a medical center which is designed for Jerusalem city. The main idea of designing this building is to make it 'simple', 'pure' which brings the feelings of peace or be cured as its function does. The two different color tones and textures of cladding on the walls are ranged together organically. The medical centre is divided by a small courtyard in two buildings, one is mainly for the uses of reception area and waiting area, the other one collects all the consultation and nurse’s rooms. A skybridge is built to lock up the two buildings visually and connect them functionally as most of the circulation areas concentrate in it.