My first thanks are to Alex and Stephanie Miller for their generous and tactful engagement in this project. Alex and I first met at the 2004 Brisbane Writers' Festival, where we were "in conversation", and we have remained in conversation ever since. On 13–14 May 2011, I hosted a symposium on "The Novels of Alex Miller" at the University of Sydney, which resulted in the edited collection, The Novels of Alex Miller: An Introduction, published by Allen & Unwin in 2012. I am grateful to colleagues contributing to that collection, all of whom retain an ongoing interest in Miller's work: David Brooks, Frank Budby, Adrian Caesar, Raimond Gaita, Elizabeth Hatte, Anita Heiss, Col McLennan, Elizabeth McMahon, Brigitta Olubas, Peter Pierce, Brigid Rooney, Ronald A. Sharp, Ingeborg van Teeseling, Brenda Walker, Shirley Walker, Elizabeth Webby, Geordie Williamson and Liliana Zavaglia. For their detailed and insightful comments on drafts of Alex Miller: The Ruin of Time, I am grateful to Nicholas Birns, Bernadette Brennan, Melpomene Dixon, Brigitta Olubas, Brigid Rooney (to whom I also owe the title), Ronald A. Sharp, Susan Sheridan and Liliana Zavaglia. Research and administrative assistance were provided by Roger Osborne and Liliana Zavaglia. Finally, thanks to Susan Murray-Smith, Agata Mrva-Montoya, and Bronwyn O'Reilly at Sydney University Press. The Ruin of Time is published in SUP's Sydney Studies in Australian Literature series, which includes sole-authored studies of contemporary Australian writers and edited collections of essays on important issues in the study of Australian literature. My work on this project was supported by an Australian Research Council DORA (2013–2016): DP130101706, Scenes of Reading: Australian Literature and the World Republic of Letters. This book is dedicated to my granddaughters, Eila and Elena Brescia.
