There are many people who have provided material, intellectual and emotional support through out my PhD candidature. I take this opportunity to express my gratitude to them.

No thesis would ever reach completion without the experience, critique and encouragement of a supervisor, and mine, Dr Eril Baily, has given me all three in abundance. Additionally, the staff of the Sydney College of the Arts and in particular the Film and Digital Art department, have provided me with invaluable technical support and advice. I am also grateful to my two proof readers, Jonathan Lane and Sarah Murray-White, who read my thesis closely, sorting out my commas and colons.

Without the support and example of my family I would not have even contemplated undertaking a PhD. Their ongoing belief in me has carried me through the difficult periods of this candidature. My friends and colleagues have provided valuable insight and distraction throughout the last four years. Their support, fellow suffering and humour have helped me through. Finally, without the staff and students of the Sydney Self Defence Centre I would not have made it through my candidature in such good shape.

I thank you all.
