Suspended 20m above the ground, elevated by slender columns which sit seamlessly with the landscaped foreground, this building comes to capture striking views of the Venetian city - providing a new and exciting perspective on a very familiar scene!

The essence of the building lies in its strong and memorable forms: those of which can be conceived as an image of parts contained within a linear element of prosaic simplicity. This in itself gives this magical glass box a strong presence in the public domain; a presence which does not request an upstaging of the architectural history that already exists, but rather, seeks to capture its beauty from a new and exciting vantage point.
