I. Manuscript & Primary Sources

The Dwyer collection in the State Library of New South Wales

On 10 July 1916, John Dwyer deposited an extensive collection of papers with the State Library of New South Wales, documenting his working life, political activism and his interest in the occult (theosophy and spiritualism). On 14 August 1917 he made another deposit, this time of mainly personal papers. The 1916 deposit was identified as ML MSS 2184; the 1917 deposit ML MSS 290. These collections are kept in the Library's Dixon manuscript collection. At some unspecified point after these deposits were made, an extensive range of material deposited by Dwyer was separated from them and scattered under various subject headings in the Mitchell Collection. These papers must be accessed through the old card index reference system maintained in the Mitchell Library. There is no way of knowing that these items are Dwyer deposits until the reader accesses them. The link to Dwyer is usually clarified by a small pencil notation made by a librarian in the margin of the document, indicating that the deposit was sourced from the Dwyer Collection. Many of the items have also been stamped 'John Dwyer'. He has done this, presumably because residents of the Active Service Brigade barracks or the other doss houses he maintained between 1893-1916 had access to the materials. Other items have some personal significance, despite their removal from the manuscript collections - Dwyer's membership records for the Federated Stewards and Cooks' Union, or correspondence between Dwyer and the Secretary of the NSW Labor Electoral Leagues, which is now in the 'Political Labour League' volume (see details below) - a volume of material entirely consisting of deposits by Dwyer. The PLL volume represents the only detailed evidence we are likely to find of a NSW Labor League grass roots activist in the pre-1900 period. To my knowledge, the PLL volume, and other records of Dwyer's Mittagong LEL activities, including his 1892 'diary of a Labour League Organiser', represent the only substantial extant collection of NSW LEL papers (The 'diary of a Labour League Organiser' is held at MSS 2184/4). Of course, this also means that these records of the PLL and LEL have been filtered through Dwyer's selection and interests. Similarly, Dwyer has made crucial deposits of papers related to the anarchists Arthur Desmond and John Arthur Andrews, predominantly held together in a volume called 'Anarchy' in the Mitchell collection. Dwyer has also preserved an important collection of Andrew's unpublished fiction (at MSS 2184/16-17). Finally, perhaps the most extraordinary collection amongst Dwyer's papers concern the manuscripts and tracts related to his interest in theosophy and the occult. Most of these are held at MSS 2184/3, although some theosophical tracts deposited by Dwyer can now be found in the Mitchell card index. I cannot claim to have entirely put the jigsaw puzzle back together, but what follows is a guide to as much of the material deposited by Dwyer that I can find in either the Dixson or Mitchell collections of the State Library of New South Wales. The guides to the collections MSS 2184 and MSS 290 outlined below follow the format of the guides prepared by the SLNSW. Please note that I have also provided below a discrete list of papers related to John Arthur Andrews.
