This project is located in Madrid near the Plaza Mayor. This building is centrally located within the city and next to a pedestrian walkway. The program for this building is a lower price range hotel which mainly caters for younger travellers. The building focuses on community and creating a community within a transient group of people. This is done by emphasizing the public areas within the building. The focus on the architecture and space is on these public areas which encourages and fosters interaction between guests at the hotel. This concept is also supported by bunk rooms. There is also one floor which is devoted to double rooms; this is envisaged to be a quieter and more solitary floor for couples to stay in.

This building has a simple footprint; to contrast this, the floor plans are more dynamic. The ground floor contains a few shop fronts which will be useful to the guest at the hotel. These are a supermarket and a travel agent. There is also a large foyer area with a café. The first floor contains all the double rooms; the second, third, and fourth floors contain the bunk rooms. Located on the top floor is a large public area with a number of swimming pools. There are also facilities for cooking and dining.
