Slippages......

exploring the aesthetic encounter from the perspective of Merleau Ponty’s ontology

BY

DANIELA TURRIN
GLASS
This volume is presented as a record of the work undertaken for the degree of Master of Visual Arts at Sydney College of the Arts.
I wish to acknowledge the assistance given to me in this project by my parents, Beppi and Carmela Turrin
Contents

List of Illustrations ........................................ 5
Summary of Work Presented For Examination ........ 7
Abstract of Research Paper ............................... 7
Description of Studio Work ............................... 7

1. Introduction: Unpacking Pandora’s Box.......... 8

2. The Sublime ........................................ 10
   Hegel: The Sublime as the Process of Representing the Unrepresentable .... 10
   Lyotard: The Sublime of the “Now” .................. 12
   The Sublime as Point of Departure .................. 13

3. Merleau-Ponty: Providing a Context ............ 14
   Embodied Perception .................................. 15
   Flesh .................................................. 15
   Reversibility ........................................ 17
   The Invisible ........................................ 17
   Where To From Here? ................................ 18

4. Space .................................................. 20
   Space. Depth and Embodiment ....................... 20
   James Turrell ........................................ 23
   Tadao Ando ........................................... 25
   Anne Juddell ......................................... 27
   Christopher Wilmarth ................................. 29
   My Own Work ........................................ 31
   Drawing Together the Threads ....................... 34

5. Time .................................................... 35
   Time as Co-Presence of Past and Future in the Present .... 35
   Anya Gallaccio ....................................... 38
   Rachel Whiteread ..................................... 40
   Andy Goldsworthy .................................... 41
   Janet Laurence ....................................... 42
   My Work .............................................. 47
   In Summary... ....................................... 50

6. Conclusion: Re-Packing the box................. 52

Endnotes .................................................. 54
Bibliography ............................................. 58
List of Illustrations

| Plate 1: | James Turrell, Air Mass, 1993
| | Installed at the Hayward Gallery, London |
| Plate 2: | James Turrell,
| | Arcus, 1989, Space Division Construction
| | Installed at Michael Hue-Williams Fine Art, London |
| Plate 3: | Tadao Ando, Water Temple, 1991 |
| Plate 4: | Tadao Ando, Water Temple, 1991
| | Exterior View, Awaji-Shima, Japan |
| Plate 7: | Anne Juddell
| | The Singing 31, 1999-2000
| | pencil, charcoal and wax on paper
| | 104.5 x 84.5 cm |
| Plate 8: | Anne Juddell
| | Mute III, 2000
| | charcoal, pastel and pencil on paper
| | 117.5 x 94 cm |
| Plate 9: | Christopher Wilmarth
| | Nine Clearings for a Standing Man #8, 1973
| | Etched glass, steel and steel cable
| | 203.2 x 152.4 x 8.9 cm |
| Plate 10: | Christopher Wilmarth
| | New Ninth, 1978
| | Etched glass, steel and steel cable
| | 101.6 x 81.3 x 15.2 cm |
| Plate 11: | Daniela Turrin
| | Lull, 2002
| | Wall panel cast in glass with negative relief
| | 34 x 51 x 3 cm |
| Plate 12: | Daniela Turrin
| | Glimpse, 2002
| | Wall panel in glass
| | 49 x 49 x 2 cm |
| Plate 13: | Anya Gallaccio
| | Intensities and surfaces, 1996
| | 32 tons of ice and half ton boulder of rock salt
| | 3 x 3 x 4m
| | The boiler room, Wapping Pumping Station, London |
Plate 14: Anya Gallaccio
Two Sisters, 1998
60 ton column of locally quarried chalk bound with plaster
6 x 2.5 m
Minerva Basin, Hull

Plate 15: Rachel Whiteread
Ghost, 1990
Plaster on steel frame
106 1/4 x 125 1/8 x 143 3/4 inches

Plate 16: Andy Goldsworthy early morning calm balanced stone
soon fell
Heysham Head, Lancashire, November 1978

Plate 17: Janet Laurence
Detail from The Unconscious and the Molecular (from the Periodic Table Series), 1995
Mixed media on aluminium, stainless steel and glass
Dimensions variable

Plate 18: Janet Laurence
Solids by Weight, Liquids by Measure (Alchemical Plates), 1993
7 metals, oil, glass, various elements on shelves
300 x 500 cm

Plate 19: Janet Laurence
49 Veils, Unity, 1998
First window facing north west

Plate 20: Janet Laurence
49 Veils, Knowledge, 1998
Second window facing south east

Plate 21: Janet Laurence
49 Veils, Love, 1998
Third window facing north east

Plate 22: Janet Laurence
49 Veils, Manifestation, 1998
Fourth window facing south west

Plate 23: Daniela Turrin
Hover, 2003
Wall panel in cast glass with negative relief at rear
75 x 41 x 2.5 cm

Plate 24: Daniela Turrin
Caress, 2004
Wall panel in cast glass with negative relief at rear
82 x 48.5 x 6 (max) cm

Plate 25: Daniela Turrin
Lacunae, 2004
Wall panel in cast glass with negative relief at rear
42 x 42 x 2.5 cm
Summary of Work
Presented For Examination

Abstract of Research Paper

This paper addresses the aesthetic encounter from the perspective of the writings of Maurice Merleau-Ponty on the visible and the invisible. It begins with the premise that from time to time we encounter situations which precipitate a sense of slippage in our experience of the world.

The paper proceeds to argue that the arts can provide a point of access to this experience, and that aesthetic theory has, for example, responded to it through the development of the notion of ‘the sublime’. The writings of Maurice Merleau-Ponty and, in particular, aspects of his text The Visible and the Invisible, are presented with a view to augmenting this aspect of aesthetic theory. Proceeding from a ‘Merleau-Pontian’ perspective, the paper explores how the arts can serve to disrupt our conventional sense of space and time – creating ripples in the substance Merleau-Ponty names as ‘flesh’ – so as to expose the chiasm or blind spot in our experience of the world.

The methodology adopted is an experiential one, which draws on the writer’s interaction with the selected works of various artists as well as her own practice in glass.

Description of Studio Work

The work presented for examination is composed of five individual glass panels presented as a single wall piece. The work will be installed in the Sydney College of the Arts Gallery as part of the 2004 Postgraduate Show in December 2004.

The panels have been cast in a refractive orange-red glass and are mounted on metal brackets attached to the wall. The surface facing the viewer is flat and has been ground and polished. The rear surface has a negative relief which, when viewed from the front, appears as a positive form within the glass. This form resembles a length of draped fabric. The overall work measures approximately 2 metres in length and 0.4 metres in height.

The work seeks to deploy the singular characteristic of glass – its transparency – to explore notions of the visible/invisible and presence/absence, which have been the subject of the research paper.